ANCIENT BURIAL-PLACE.

This burial ground, originally dedicated to that use in 1706, was conveyed by John Dane to the Hamlet parish. It then measured one-half of an acre in area. Mr. Dane died the next year, and his gravestone is the oldest one in the yard. The following are all of the stones now standing there, bearing dates prior to 1800.

The hour is coming in which all that are in the grave shall hear his voice and come forth. JOHN V. 28th & 29th.
How short, How precarious, How uncertain is life:
How quick the transition from Time to Eternity:
A breath, a gasp, a groan or two,
And we are seen no more.
Yet on this brittle thread (Alarming thought) Hangs vast Eternity.

SALEM IN 1700. NO. 26.

BY SIDNEY PERLEY.

The map on page 14 represents that part of Salem which is bounded by Walnut, Essex and Liberty streets and the South river. It is based on actual surveys and title deeds, and is drawn on a scale of two hundred feet to an inch. It shows the location of all the houses that were standing there in 1700.

The braces marked "a" show where Charter street runs; and the braces marked "b" where Derby street runs.

Essex street was one of the original highways of the town. It was called the street or common highway in 1658; ye highway, 1678; the main street, 1705; and Essex street in 1799.

Walnut street was called a highway in 1694; a lane leading to ye South river, 1705; Elder Brown's lane, 1725; Brown's lane, 1734; and Walnut street, 1795.

Elm street was an ancient way to the cove; and was called the street or common highway in 1658; a way in 1669; a lane or street, 1674; the lane or highway that goes down to South river, 1685; ye street or town highway, 1687; highway by Peter Osgood's tanhouse, 1695; the highway or lane that goeth toward Maj. John Higginson's wharf and warehouse, 1696; the lane which leads downe from Col. John Higginson's house to ye South river, 1699; the lane which leads down from the main street to ye South river, 1699; a lane leading down to Peter Osgood's, 1705; the lane that leads from the main street downe to the South river nigh Capt. Osgood's, 1710; ye lane that goes down to Capt. Osgood's, 1711; Osgood's lane, 1737; Lowther's lane, 1755; Lowder's lane, 1759; Loder's lane, 1785; Loader's lane, 1785; Lother's lane, 1785; Lodder's lane, 1792; and Ehn street, 1796.

Liberty street is also an ancient way. It was called Ye lane next to John Pitman's in 1670; ye lane or highway that leads down to the river, 1672; the lane or highway that goes down to the South river, 1678; the lane that goes down to ye burying place, 1683; the burying place lane, 1690; highway that leads down to ye water's side, 1697; Liberty lane, 1789; and Liberty street, 1800.

The western half of that part of Charter street shown on the map as a lane, was a strip of land conveyed by Hilliard Veren, jr., of Salem, merchant, to William Browne, jr., of Salem, merchant, Nov. 8, 1679,* for a way into the grantee's land. When the lot of land, to which this lane led, was conveyed by Richard Moore, sr., of Salem, mariner, to William Browne, jr., of Salem Sept. 27, 1671,† the grantor reserved a right of way over the lot from his house to what is now Essex street. To free his land from this incumbrance, Mr. Browne bought of Mr. Veren the strip of land of eighteen feet in width above-mentioned and with a strip off the southern end of his own lot made a way for Captain Moore out to what is now Liberty street. This part of the street was called in the year it was laid out, 1679, the lane or highway that goes to Captain More's; the lane that goes to Capt. Richard More's orchard, 1683; Captain More's lane, 1687; and ye lane that leads down to Captain Osgood's, 1709. The lane was extended to what is now Walnut street soon after the Long (or, Union) wharf was built, about 1730. It was called the lane leading from the burying point lane to the long wharf in 1747; the highway, 1772; the street, 1773; highway leading to the long wharf, 1779; a lane leading to the long wharf called Union wharf, 1783; and the street leading from Liberty street to the long wharf there so called, 1789. In 1795, that part of the street lying between Walnut and Elm streets was called Neptune street, and from Elm to Liberty street, Vine street. In 1853, both sections were called Charter street.

The present Derby street, the location of which is shown on the map by the braces marked "b" was made by filling the river shortly before 1784. It was called the highway near the South river in 1784; Water street, 1795; and Derby street, 1871.

The river was so called in 1654; the sea, 1687; the South river, 1687; the river or salt water, 1705; and the harbor or South river, 1722.

The cove was so called in 1688; and called the dock in 1789. It was probably not filled up and the street extended over it until about 1840(?).

In the sketches that follow, after 1700, titles and deeds referred to pertain to the houses and land adjoining and not always to the whole lot, the design being, after that date, to give the history of the houses then standing principally.

William Curtis House. This was the homestead of Daniel Rumball, the blacksmith, in 1659. Upon condition that his son-in-law, William Curtice, and wife Alice, daughter of Mr. Rumball, support him for life and also pay his burial expenses, he conveyed his estate to Mr. and Mrs. Curtice March 18, 1681-2.* Mr. Curtice was also a blacksmith, and lived here. In consideration of love, Mr. and Mrs. Curtice conveyed the house, barn and land to their daughter Elizabeth and her husband, John Lowther of Salem, Feb. 17, 1704-5.† Mr. Lowder died in 1717, leaving his wife Elizabeth, and children, Jared (or, Garrett) Lowther, Nicholas Lowder, James Lowder, Abigail Lowder, Martha Lowder, Daniel Lowder, and Elizabeth, wife of John Callum of Salem, mariner. Jared lived in Salem, being a shipwright; Daniel lived in Salem, being a barber; and Nicholas lived in Salem, being a cordwainer. Daniel bought out the heirs of his father; Nicholas, Oct. 22, 1717;‡ Jared, Dec. 1, 1718;§ and Elizabeth, Nov. 10, 1720.¶ Daniel Lowder died in 1722, having devised the estate to his mother, widow Elizabeth Lowder. She conveyed the house and land around it to her son-in-law Benjamin Allen of Salem, joiner, Dec. 13, 1737.§ Mr. Allen died before Jan. 20, 1768, when his heirs made partition of the estate.|| In this division, the house is called "ye old house," and with the land around it was assigned to Abigail, wife of Joseph Gilford of Salem, mariner, and Martha, wife of John Teague of Salem, hatter. Feb. 20, 1768, Mrs. Gilford and Mrs. Teague, with their husbands, made a division of the estate, the house and land around it being assigned to Mrs. Gilford.¶¶ Mrs. Gilford died in 1797, having devised the house and land around it to her son Joseph Gilford of Salem, laborer, and her daughter Sarah Gilford of Salem, singlewoman. In the inventory of Mrs. Gilford's estate, the house is called "an old dwelling house." It was gone in 1799, when Joseph and Sarah sold the land to Benjamin West, who built the brick block upon the lot.

John Higginson Lot. This was a part of the lot of Samuel Archer April 27, 1665, when he conveyed it, being then a part of a larger lot, to James Browne of Salem, merchant. Mr. Browne was murdered in Maryland Nov. 12, 1675. By an agreement between the widow and the children of the deceased, dated Sept. 15, 1694, this land was assigned to his daughter Elizabeth Browne.†† For two pounds, Miss Browne conveyed it to Col. John Higginson, jr., of Salem, mer-

Samuel Phippen House. This lot belonged to Samuel Archer of Salem April 27, 1665, when he conveyed that part of it lying east of the dashes to James Browne of Salem, merchant.† Mr. Browne was murdered in Maryland Nov. 12, 1675. By an agreement between his widow and children this lot, then called the great garden, was released to his daughter Elizabeth Browne Sept. 15, 1694.‡ Miss Browne conveyed the land to Samuel Phippen (or, Phippeny), sr., of Salem, blockmaker, Oct. 6, 1699.§

That part of the lot lying westerly of the dashes remained the property of Samuel Archer until his death in December, 1667, when it was valued at five pounds. The estate was insolvent, and William Browne, sr., of Salem, esquire and merchant, the principal creditor, took the place. Samuel Archer's widow, then Susannah, wife of Richard Hutchinson, released her dower interest in the lot to Mr. Browne July 5, 1669.|| He erected a house upon the lot, and, for eighty pounds, conveyed the house and this part of the lot to Mr. Phippen, who owned the remainder of this lot, March 30, 1681.¶ Sept. 27, 1687, Samuel Archer (or, Archard) of Salem, house-carpenter, eldest son of the deceased Samuel Archer, released the land to Mr. Browne. Samuel Phippen died Feb. 1, 1717-8, at the age of sixty-eight, intestate. The house and an old shop and the land were then appraised at eighty pounds. The real estate was divided among his children May 21, 1733, when it was valued at one hundred and twelve pounds and ten shillings. The house and the land around it were assigned to his son Nathaniel Phippen of Salem, cooper. Nathaniel Phippen died in 1756, possessed of the house and land around it, which was described in the inventory of his estate as "One Old house & Land in y^e Lane former Sam^l Phippens dec^d," and valued at sixty-five pounds, six shillings and eight pence. In his will he devised his real estate to his children, David, Israel, Thomas, Margaret and Anstes. In the division of the real estate, Nov. 15, 1759, this old house and the land around it were assigned to son Thomas Phippen, who then lived in the house.* The executor of the will of David Phippen of Salem, gentleman, deceased, brought suit against Thomas Phippen; and, May 13, 1785, this lot with the old house thereon, was set off to the estate in satisfaction of the judgment.† July 9, 1785, the executor of David Phippen's will, for sixty-four pounds, ten shillings and six pence, conveyed the lot and buildings thereon to John Fisk of Salem, merchant;‡ and the house was gone before 1792, when Mr. Fisk sold the lot.

Estate of Samuel Very House. This lot belonged to John Archer as early as 1665. He lived in Salem, and was a cooper. He gave this lot of land by deed to his daughter Abigail and her husband Samuel Very May 9, 1685.§ Mr. Very built a house upon the lot in which he lived. He died in 1697, possessed of the estate. Probably after the death of his widow Abigail, the remainder of his real estate was divided, and the house and land were assigned to his eldest son Samuel Very Oct. 29, 1716. In 1697, the house and land were valued at forty pounds. Samuel Very, jr., lived in Salem, being a mariner. For eighty pounds, he conveyed the house and land to David Montgomery of Salem, mariner, July 20, 1734.|| Mr. Montgomery died in 1737. The house, barn and land around them were then valued at one hundred and twenty-five pounds. His widow and administratrix, Sarah Montgomery, for sixty-five pounds, conveyed the house and land around it to David Phippen of Salem, joiner, Jan. 27, 1740.* Deacon Phippen apparently removed the house soon afterward.

Benjamin Archer House. This lot belonged to John Archer quite early. He was a cooper, and died in 1693, intestate. The estate passed to his son Benjamin Archer, who was also a cooper. Benjamin Archer probably built a house on the land about 1694. He died about 1705, and the house and lot descended to his children, namely: John Archer, Benjamin Archer, Sarah, wife of John Swasey, and Josiah Archer. John Archer of Salem, cordwainer and fisherman, released his interest in the house and lot to his brother Benjamin Archer of Salem, mariner, Dec. 18, 1722.† Josiah and Sarah probably did the same. The house was gone a few years later.

John Higginson House. John Archer owned this house and lot quite early. He lived in the house, and died in 1693. That part of the estate lying northerly of the dashes became the property of John Higginson of Salem, merchant, about 1696.

On the triangular part of the lot lying below the dashes Mr. Higginson built a brewhouse before Nov. 26, 1695, when the administrator of the estate of John Archer, for thirty shillings, conveyed the land to Mr. Higginson.‡

Mr. Higginson died March 23, 1719, and, for sixty pounds, his surviving executor conveyed the house and entire lot to Jonathan Archer of Salem, carman, Feb. 1, 1721-2.§ Mr. Archer probably immediately removed the house.

The wharf site and small piece of land back of it was conveyed by John Archer, sr., of Salem, cooper, for eight pounds, to John Higginson Dec. 12, 1684.* For four pounds, Mr. Higginson conveyed one-half of it to Lt. Thomas Gardner of Salem Feb. 14, 1686-7.† Messrs. Higginson and Gardner built a wharf and warehouse thereon, and, June 6, 1687, divided the warehouse, Higginson to have the northern end, and Gardner the southern. Fifty feet of the wharf before the warehouse was to continue in common between them.‡ They, also, laid out a highway as marked on the map, twenty feet wide, Nov. 10, 1691.‡ Mr. Higginson died in 1719, and his surviving executor conveyed his half of the warehouse, wharf and land to Peter Osgood of Salem, tanner, Feb. 27, 1721-2.§ Thomas Gardner conveyed his interest to Captain Osgood at about the same time.

Benjamin Allen Houses. That part of this lot lying north of the dashes early belonged to William Allen of Manchester, carpenter, and he conveyed it, with the house thereon, to John Bridgman of Salem 9: 4 mo: 1652.¶ Mr. Bridgman died in 1655, leaving a will: "that his whole estate shal bee deliuered into m^e curwins hand and when hee hath fatisfied him selfe to giu the rest to his daughter." George Corwin of Salem, merchant, for eighteen pounds, conveyed the house and that part of the lot to Thomas Barnes of Salem, blacksmith, 25: 11: 1658.¶ The title passed from Thomas Barnes to Capt. Benjamin Allen in or before 1695. Mr. Barnes' blacksmith shop was conveyed with the land. Captain Allen died in 1703, possessed of the old dwelling house, in which Mr. Habakkuk Gardner then lived, and the smith's shop and land. Captain Allen died intestate, and his daughter, Rachel Allen of Salem, conveyed the house and that end of the lot to her brother-in-law Capt. John Richards of Salem, mariner, Oct. 28, 1709.* Captain Richards conveyed the house and that end of the lot to John Phippen of Salem July 23, 1711.† Mr. Phippen removed the old house a few years later.

Captain Allen probably erected the house on the western end of this part of the lot soon after 1695. He died possessed of it in 1703; and the house and land, with the barn and woodhouse, came into the possession of Capt. John Richards, probably the inheritance of his wife Mary, daughter of Captain Allen. Captain Richards removed to Boston, where he was a mariner, and, with his wife Mary, for three hundred and seventy pounds, conveyed the house and land around it to Joseph Grafton of Salem, mariner, Nov. 30, 1727.‡ Captain Grafton died in the winter of 1766-7, having in his will devised this estate to his three daughters, Susanna, Mary and Anna, all unmarried. For four hundred and sixty pounds, they conveyed the house and land around it to Joseph Peabody of Salem Sept. 30, 1790.§ Mr. Peabody became a merchant, and for fifty-four hundred dollars, conveyed the house, "wherein I now live," and the barn and land under and adjoining them to Dr. Moses Little of Salem March 7, 1799.|| Doctor Little probably removed the old house immediately after his purchase.

That part of the lot lying between the dashes was in the possession of Samuel Archer, sr., before 1658. He died in 1667, and it descended to his son Samuel Archer, Samuel Archer of Salem, carpenter, conveyed it to Capt. Benjamin Allen Aug. 9, 1695;¶ and he died possessed of it in 1703.

That part of the lot lying south of the dashes was also early in the possession of Samuel Archer (or, Archard) who died in 1667. William Browne, sr., of Salem, merchant, was the largest creditor of the deceased, and he apparently took the land for his debt. Susannah, the widow of Mr. Archer, married, secondly, Richard Hutchinson, and she conveyed her dower interest in the premises to Mr. Browne July 5, 1669.* Mr. Browne conveyed the land to Joseph Phippen of Salem, fisherman, Dec. 28, 1674.† Mr. Phippen conveyed it to his brothers, David Phippen and Samuel Phippen, both of Salem, Jan. 15, 1694-5.‡ David Phippen and Samuel Phippen conveyed it to Capt. Benjamin Allen Aug. 5, 1695;§ and Captain Allen died possessed of it in 1703.

Samuel Archer Lot. Samuel Archer, sr., of Salem, owned this lot in 1658; and he died possessed of the lot and the house thereon in 1667. That part of the lot lying north of the dashes descended to his son Samuel Archer, who owned it until after 1700.

That part of the lot lying south of the dashes and the house were taken by William Browne, sr., of Salem, merchant, in satisfaction apparently of his claim against the estate of Samuel Archer, sr., being the largest creditor; and Susannah, widow of Mr. Archer, and then wife of Richard Hutchinson, conveyed her dower interest in this part of his estate to Mr. Browne July 5, 1669.* Mr. Browne conveyed the house and land around it to Joseph Phippen of Salem, fisherman, Dec. 28, 1674;† and Mr. Phippen conveyed the estate to his brothers David Phippen and Samuel Phippen, both of Salem, Jan. 15, 1694-5.‡ David Phippen and Samuel Phippen, for fifty pounds, conveyed the house and this part of the lot to Capt. Benjamin Allen of Salem Aug. 5, 1695.§ Captain Allen removed the house the same year.

Miles Ward House. This lot belonged to Joshua Ward as early as 1669. He died in 1680, leaving this lot of land, with a house thereon, the estate being valued at one hundred pounds. It descended to his son Miles (or Michael) Ward, who was a chairmaker. The latter conveyed the house, barn and land, "where I now dwell," to his son Ebenezer Ward of Salem, joiner, March 7, 1755.* The father died in 1764, having continued to live in the house, and Ebenezer probably removed the house soon afterwards.

Peter Osgood House. That part of this lot lying within the dashes at the north-westerly corner was the property of William Chichester in 1654; and Henry Bartholomew of Salem conveyed it to Richard More of Salem July 11, 1664.† Mr. More was a mariner, and conveyed the land to William Browne, esq., and Mr. Benjamin Browne, both of Salem, May 14, 1688;‡ and they conveyed it to Peter Osgood of Salem, tanner, May 1, 1696.§

The remainder of the lot was the homestead of Capt. Richard More in 1664, and there his house stood. He mortgaged a little strip of land next to the "primm" hedge, extending from his house to the South river, including his out-kitchen and leanto, to Philip Cromwell of Salem, slaughterer, Dec. 17, 1687;|| and Captain More conveyed the fee in the same property to Mr. Cromwell May 10, 1690.¶ The bound of the northeast corner of the lot conveyed was a plum tree; and a right of way was granted through Captain More's orchard to the lane leading down to Richard Friend's house. Mr. Cromwell died, and his executor conveyed the lot to William Browne and Benjamin Browne, the owners of the land adjoining, April 20, 1696. Captain More conveyed the western or old part of his dwelling house and the land within the dashes, except the strip mortgaged to Mr. Cromwell, to William Browne, esq., and Mr. Benjamin Browne, both of Salem, May 14,

1688;* and the two Brownes conveyed the same estate to Mr. Osgood May 1, 1696.†

The wharf at the southern corner of the lot was built by Richard More, sr., before Oct. 29, 1687, when he conveyed the wharf and flats it was built on, for nine pounds, to John Higginson, jr., of Salem, merchant.‡ The deed also conveyed the way for cart and on foot that already existed from Captain More's gate to the wharf. Mr. Higginson died in 1719, and his surviving executor conveyed the property to Mr. Osgood Feb. 26, 1721-2.§

Captain More conveyed the easterly part of the house, called by the name of new room or ye long room, barn and land to the eastward lying between the dashes to his son Richard More, jr., July 10, 1688.|| Probably the land conveyed by this deed included the larger portion of the lot lying northerly of the dashes. Richard More, jr., who was, also, a mariner and lived here, conveyed this part of the house and the barn and lot to Mr. Osgood May 1, 1690.¶

That part of the lot lying at the north-easterly corner of the premises was early owned by Capt. Richard More, and he apparently conveyed the southern part of it to his son Richard More, jr., before 1688. Both father and son join in a deed of this part of the lot to Mr. Osgood July 5, 1688.

Thus Captain More obtained possession of the entire lot and buildings. He owned the estate for many years after 1700, and the house was probably removed soon after that date.

Richard Friend House. William Chichester owned this lot in 1654; and Henry Bartholomew of Salem conveyed it to Richard More, sr., of Salem July 11, 1664.* Mr. More's son-in-law Samuel Dutch of Salem, husband of his daughter Susannah, built a house upon the lot before June 4, 1684, when Mr. More conveyed the land to Mr. Dutch and his issue by said Susannah,† including a right of way to the lane, as marked on the map. Mr. Dutch was a mariner, and died in 1694, possessed of the house and lot, which descended to his children. The land was then valued at twenty pounds, and the house at ten pounds.

Richard Friend owned the house and lot in 1705, and lived there. He died in 1706, when the house and land were appraised at thirty-one pounds. His widow and administratrix, Martha Friend of Andover, for thirty-four pounds, conveyed the house and land to Capt. Peter Osgood of Salem, tanner, Nov. 15, 1707.‡ The house was removed probably soon afterward by Captain Osgood.

That part of the lot lying easterly of the dashes, Mr. Dutch conveyed to John Conant of Marblehead, house-carpenter, Nov. 23, 1692,§ but the title was soon again in Mr. Dutch.

Eleazer Keazer House. This lot belonged to Major William Hathorne of Salem in 1654. He conveyed the lot, except the two little lots shown by the dashes on the map, to George Keazer of Lynn, tanner, 28 : 18 : 1654.¶ There was at that time a cellar on the lot, within the six dashes, "over the which a warehouse is to be erected." The little lots lying within the dashes Major Hathorne conveyed to his son Eleazer Hathorne of Salem, merchant, Dec. 28, 1664.¶ There was then "an old seller" upon the lot, lying within the six dashes, and George Keazer built a house upon it before Oct. 7, 1670, when Eleazer Hathorne conveyed the lot to him. For eight pounds and ten shillings, Mr. Hathorne undertook to convey the smaller of the two lots to his wife Abigail, who was daughter of Capt. George Corwin of Salem, March 20, 1671;* and he conveyed it to Mr. Keazer Nov. 12, 1672.† Thus Mr. Keazer became the owner of the entire lot. He lived in this house, and died in 1690, having devised the estate to his eldest son Eleazer Keazer. The house was probably gone soon after 1700, when Eleazer Keazer owned the land.

Eleazer Keazer House. This lot belonged to Maj. William Hathorne, and he conveyed it to George Keazer of Lynn 28 : 8 : 1654.‡ Mr. Keazer removed to Salem, where he was a tanner; and died possessed of the land in 1690, having in his will devised it, with a barn thereon, to his son John Keazer of Haverhill. John Keazer was massacred at Haverhill by the Indians March 15, 1696-7. In the division of his real estate this lot was assigned to his son Eleazer Keazer. Apparently, Eleazer had conveyed the lot to his uncle Eleazer of Salem about 1699, when the latter probably had built a house thereon. How long the house stood is unknown.

Sarah Keazer Lot. This lot belonged to Maj. William Hathorne who conveyed it to George Keazer of Lynn 28 : 8 : 1654.‡ Mr. Keazer removed to Salem, where he was a tanner; and died possessed of the land in 1690, having devised it, with the barn thereon, to his son John Keazer. John Keazer removed to Haverhill, where he and his son George were massacred by the Indians March 15, 1696-7. In the division of his real estate, this lot was assigned to his daughter Sarah Keazer, who continued to own it until 1705.

Eleazer Keazer House. This lot early belonged to William Hathorne, who conveyed it to George Keazer of Lynn 28 : 8 : 1654.‡ Mr. Keazer removed to Salem, where he was a tanner; and March 16, 1677-8, deeded this lot to his daughter Mary and her husband Thomas Mould and the heirs of her body.* Mr. Mould built a house upon the land, and in some way the title to the land was again in Mr. Keazer before his death, in 1690. In the division of Mr. Keazer's estate, the lot was assigned to Capt. Eleazer Keazer of Salem, tanner, who died possessed of it in 1721. The house, however, continued to belong to Mr. Mould until his decease, before Feb. 13, 1699, when administration was granted upon his estate. The house was then appraised at fifteen pounds and ten shillings. There was also a small barn, "butting on the burying place lane," which was valued at four pounds and ten shillings. The house was bought apparently of the estate of Mr. Mould by Eleazer Keazer, who, for sixty-five pounds, conveyed the house and land around it to Capt. Eleazer Moses of Salem, mariner, Oct. 15, 1709.† Captain Moses died in 1718, and the house and lot came into the possession of his son Eleazer. The house probably was removed a few years later.

William Browne House. This lot belonged to Peter Palfrey of Salem, planter, very early. He removed to Reading, and conveyed the land to John Porter of Salem, yeoman, Dec. 10, 1653.‡ Mr. Porter's son, Joseph Porter, married Anna, daughter of Maj. William Hathorne of Salem, Jan. 27, 1664-5. Twenty-five days previously the parents conveyed the marriage portions to their children. Mr. Porter conveyed this lot and other land to his son.§ Joseph Porter lived in Salem, and conveyed the land to Hilliard Veren, jr., of Salem, merchant, Sept. 17, 1678.¶ Mr. Veren, for fifteen pounds, conveyed the lot to his father, Hilliard Veren, sr., of Salem, Nov. 29, 1679.¶ For twenty-six pounds and five shillings, Mr. Veren conveyed the land to Robert Hodge of Salem, mariner, May 15, 1680.* Mr. Hodge erected a house upon the lot, and, for one hundred and sixty pounds, he conveyed the house and land to William Browne, esq., of Salem Jan. 3, 1682-3.† The estate belonged to Mr. Browne in 1710, and the house was standing some years thereafter.

Walter Price House. This lot belonged to Peter Palfrey of Salem, planter, very early. He removed to Reading, and conveyed the land to John Porter of Salem, yeoman, Dec. 10, 1653.‡ Mr. Porter's son, Joseph Porter, married Anna, daughter of Maj. William Hathorne of Salem, Jan. 27, 1664-5. Twenty-five days previously the parents conveyed the marriage portions of their children to them. Mr. Porter conveyed this lot to his son.§ Joseph Porter lived in Salem, and conveyed the land to Hilliard Veren, jr., of Salem Sept. 17, 1678.¶ Mr. Veren built a house upon the lot, and died possessed of the estate in 1680. The house then had in it a parlor, hall, shop, leanto and garret chambers. The estate was then valued at two hundred and forty pounds. In his will, he devised the estate to his wife Hannah.¶ They were apparently childless. She died in the autumn of 1683, having devised the estate to her brother John Price of Salem. Captain Price died in 1691, and the estate was then appraised at two hundred and fifty pounds. It descended to his only child, Walter Price of Salem, esquire and merchant. He died in March, 1731, possessed of the estate. For one hundred and fifty pounds, Mr. Price's widow and executrix conveyed the house in which she then lived, and the lot of land to Dr. Joseph Bartlett of Salem April 30, 1748.* Doctor Bartlett died in the autumn of 1751, possessed of the house and lot. In his will, he devised two undivided thirds of his real estate to his son Walter and the other third to his wife Sarah. The house, barn and land were then appraised at two hundred pounds. The son, Walter Price Bartlett of Salem, auctioneer, came into the possession of the entire estate at the death of his mother, and he removed the old house between 1793 and 1801.

William Browne House.† This land, with a house thereon, belonged to John Horne of Salem 13 : 7 : 1655, when, for twenty-four pounds, he conveyed the same to Richard Moore of Salem.‡ The house was gone Sept. 27, 1671, when Richard Moore, sr., of Salem, mariner, for thirty pounds, conveyed the lot to William Browne, jr., of Salem, with a right of way from the grantor's house to the street.§ Captain Browne erected a house upon the lot. He became an esquire and merchant, and, for one hundred and ninety-five pounds, conveyed the house, orchard and land, reserving the barn or stable at the southern end of the lot, to James Putnam of Salem Village June 16, 1710.|| Mr. Putnam was a bricklayer, and by deed conveyed the northern half of the messuage to his son Bartholmew Putnam of Salem, mariner, May 17, 1716.¶ The house was gone about that time.

Judges: Mr. Symon Brodstreet, Mr. Samuell Symonds, Maj. Daniell Denison and Mr. Will: Hubbard.

Trial jury: Mr. Jo: Apleton, Tho: Borman, Tho: Bishop, Robort Day, Joseph Reding, Hugh Smith, Sam: Brocklbanck, Ezek Northen, Ben: Swett, John Bishop, Robt Coker and Will: Evans.

Richard Coye v. Mr William Hubbard, sr. Review. [Copy of verdict, which was upon the bargain made with Mr. Whittingham, ten years' service, 27: 1: 1655.

Haniell Bosworth testified that while we were in London and all the way we came to New England I never heard any other time mentioned that Richard Coy came over with Mr. Whittingham but ten years. Sworn in Ipswich court 27: 1: 1655.

John Anable testified that he heard Mr. Whittingham say that Richard Coy was to be with him ten years, and that he heard his (Richard's) sister Mary Coy say that her brother Richard Coy was to serve Mr. Whittingham ten years, and it was so spoken of generally amongst us that were servants.

Robert Smith testified that it was so reported all the way we came to New England. Sworn in Ipswich court 27: 1: 1655.

Samuel Kent and Benjamin Muzy deposed that Richard Coy served Mr. Hubberd after seven years one and one-half years. Sworn in court March 28, 1655.

Samuel Kent deposed that a month before the trial Richard Coy and Mr. Hubberd were talking together about Richard's time. Mr. Hubberd said he was going to Boston and would talk with Richard's sister there. Richard was sent away meanly clad, his best suit being a slight stuff, and the breeches having no lining in them, and one old suit more. Sworn in Ipswich court 27: 1: 1655.

Benjamin Mussy, aged about twenty years, testified that he was living at Mr. Hubbard's when Richard Coy and Mr. Hubbard talked about Richard's time. Sworn 27: 1: 1655.

Mr. Whittingham brought over Richard Coy and his brother Mathew Coy in 1638 with divers other servants who first came from Boston in Lincolnshire to London where Mr. Whittingham kept them upon his own charges from May 1st till June 24th, so that his bringing up to London and charges of his staying there could not be less than forty shillings, his passage to New England five pounds, for a boy of thirteen years of age. His brother is two years older, served eight years to Mr. Haugh.

Mathew Coy, aged thirty-three years or thereabouts, deposed that at their coming to New England, his mother sent Richard Coy with his sister Mary to Mr. Whittingham, then at Boston, in England, and told them she was willing that her son Richard Coy should serve but seven years with Mr. Whittingham or else Richard should return home. Sworn March 20, 1655, before Ri: Bellingham, governor.

ROWLEY IN ENGLAND.

BY OSCAR FAY ADAMS.

Population: 512 (1891). Acreage: 6,428. About seven miles from Hull. Parish church, St. Peter; register from 1565; living, a rectory. Chapels: Chapel-of-ease; Wesleyan chapel. Parish council composed of eleven members. The manor belongs to the Harrison-Broadley family.

According to Cotton Mather's "Magnalia" the Massachusetts Rowley was so named by its first minister, the Reverend Ezekiel Rogers, a native of Wethersfield, in Essex, "who called the town Rowley and continued in it about the same number of years that he had spent in that Rowley whence he came on the other side of the Atlantick ocean."

"That Rowley," whence the Reverend Ezekiel departed in 1638 to his new charge over seas, is a very extensive parish in the East Riding of Yorkshire about one hundred and seventy miles from London. Within its borders are the various hamlets of Bentley, Hunsley, Ribblingham, Risby, Rowley and Little Weighton. The hamlet of Rowley is some five miles north of Brough station on the Hull and Selby division of the North Eastern system, but a much nearer station is that at Little Weighton (locally wee-t'n), on the Hull and Barnsley railway. Approaching from the direction of Brough the highway, after passing through the village of Elloughton, presently ascends the chalk wolds whence opens an extended prospect across the Humber into Lincolnshire. A stretch of upland next crossed the road descends one slope only to ascend a second on which is the hamlet of Ribblingham with its four houses, and a mile beyond these is the hamlet of Rowley. A footpath that leaves the main road to cross a wide pasture, that is almost like a wooded park in places, furnishes the most direct access to the object of the journey, and soon brings one before a large rectory in the midst of lawns and gardens, and immediately adjoining these on the west is seen the diminutive church of Saint Peter.

And church and rectory set midmost of the spacious glebe are all there is of Rowley hamlet. By day and in the summer sunshine it is indeed a pleasant spot, this fair green pasture encircled by arcestral trees and with cattle picturesquely distributed, one might almost say posed, about the expanse, but at night and in winter, it can hardly fail of being somewhat lonely.

The church, which will seat only one hundred and fifty persons, consists of a nave of three bays, chancel, low western pinnaced tower and south porch. It is of brick faced with cement and is in great part in the transitional Norman style. The tower, which has but one bell, opens from the nave through a low arch in character scarcely more than a doorway, and from the south side of the chancel a low wide arch, with rosettes in the soffit, affords entrance into the mortuary chapel of the Elleker family that now serves as a robing room.

In the hamlet of Bentley is the small Chapel-of-ease, and in Little Weighton, which contains some thirty houses and is the largest of all the hamlets, is a Wesleyan chapel, but in the wholewide parish no other churches will be discovered.

From Rowley church, a pleasant path extends across the glebe to the high road leading to Little Weighton, half a mile further, and here the train for Hull may be taken. Little Weighton cannot be honestly characterized as an attractive village but as a place of residence it is distinctly preferable to the ugly village of Walkington, three miles to the northeast, with its parish church situated in the midst of an unkempt, neglected churchyard.

There is little in the way of scenery to be noted in Rowley parish but the traveler will find the seven-mile walk to Beverley a pleasant one, and he will be likely to note that in the East Riding, as in Massachusetts, Essex, Beverley and Rowley are in neighborly proximity. Save once in the state of Iowa the name of Rowley finds echo only in New England.

HON. LEONARD WHITE.

Hon. Leonard White of Haverhill, whose portrait appears as the frontispiece of this number of The Antiquarian, was born in Haverhill May 3, 1767, being son of Hon. John and Sarah (Le Barron) White. The father graduated at Harvard college in 1751; was a merchant, and a member of the provincial congress in 1775.

Leonard White was also educated at Harvard, graduating in 1787. He was the patron of Josiah Quincy while in college. With Mr. White, John Quincy Adams was a student of Rev. John Shaw of Haverhill, and together, in the same class, they pursued their college course. Rev. Peter Eaton, afterward pastor of the Second church in Boxford for about half a century, was also in the same class.

Mr. White lived in Haverhill, and married, first, Mary, daughter of Hon. Tristram Dalton of Newburyport Aug. 21, 1794. Her father was a member of the first senate of the United States, and during the years Mr. Dalton was in Washington, Miss Dalton was on very friendly terms with the president's family, visiting Mrs. Washington for weeks at a time.

Mr. White served on the school committee; was town clerk and treasurer of Haverhill, 1804-1810, 1815, 1818, 1821-1831, 1838 and 1839; and represented the town in the legislature in 1809. From 1811 to 1813 he was a member of congress.

The Merrimack Bank in Haverhill was established soon afterward, and he was chosen its first cashier, holding the office for a quarter of a century, until the infirmities of age compelled its relinquishment.

Though having all the advantages of good birth, education and the highest society, he was neither brilliant nor ambitious. He was a gentleman of the old school, modest, unassuming, and of a kindly and cheerful disposition. He was eminently faithful, punctual and honest in the discharge of every duty that came to him.

He was a religious man, and a member of the Baptist church, believing most firmly and happily and living in the benign light of gospel truth.

Mrs. White died June 18, 1839, at the age of sixty-eight, after they had lived together for about forty-five years. Three years and three days later, he married secondly, Mrs. Hannah Cummings.

For about two years before his death he had repeated attacks of paralysis, and he died, Oct. 10, 1849, at the age of eighty-two, as quietly and as undisturbed as an infant going to sleep. He was the survivor of his class in college.

Mr. White's children were, Mary Ann, who married David How, jr., a merchant of Haverhill, and afterwards of New York; Leonard D.; Sarah D.; Katherine; George; Frederick, who lived in New York; Robert Hooper, who lived in New York; Katherine; Edward, who lived first in New York city and subsequently at Dalton, Ga.; and John L., who lived in New York. Several of the children died young.

ANSWERS.

331. In this query, John Patch is stated to have come from England with two brothers and settled Ipswich. He was born in 1721 and died in 1799. There must be a mistake in these statements, as the Patch family was in Ipswich in the preceding century.—Ed.

465. Elizabeth Waite, daughter of Aaron and Elizabeth Waite of Ipswich, was left fatherless when a child, under fourteen years of age. Her father was son of Capt. Samuel and Ruth Waite. Captain Waite was a weaver, and lived in Ipswich. His wife Ruth was living in 1750. His will, dated Jan. 26, 1750, was proved June 11, 1756. He had two sons, Samuel and Aaron, and a daughter, Ruth Lakeman, all living in 1750. Aaron died before Dec. 15, 1761, leaving widow Elizabeth and children, Elizabeth, Elias and Aaron.—Ed.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

TRANSACTIONS OF THE KANSAS STATE HISTORICAL SOCIETY, 1905-1906. Topeka, Kansas, 1906. This is volume nine of these reports, and one of the most if not the most valuable and interesting of the series. It is cloth bound, and contains 654 octavo pages of fine type, and many illustrations. The contributed articles are principally devoted to Missions among the Indians in Kansas, river navigation, soldiers of Kansas, politics, the railroad convention of 1860, the drought of 1860, the birthplaces of Kansans, reminiscences, etc. The society is doing most excellent work in preserving the detailed history of the state.

WILLIAM YATES AND HIS DESCENDANTS. By Edgar Yates. Old Orchard, Me., 1906. This is a pamphlet of fifty octavo pages. It contains the history and genealogy of William Yates (1772-1868) of Greenwood, Me., and his wife, who was Martha Morgan, together with the line of her descent from Robert Morgan of Beverly. There is given a coat of arms of the English Yates family, portraits of William Yates and his wife, and a half-tone engraving of their old home, and several other portraits, autographs, etc. The book has much valuable and interesting matter. The compiler's address is 28 Sherman st., Everett, Mass.

THE LITTLE ANDOVER

ST. MARY'S CHURCH, IN ANDOVER, ENGLAND

THE ESSEX ANTIQUARIAN.

VOL. XI.

SALEM, MASS., APRIL, 1907.

NO. 2.

ANDOVER IN ENGLAND.

BY OSCAR FAY ADAMS.

Population : 6,000 (1900). 67 miles from London (Waterloo terminus of South Western railway). Parish church : St. Mary the Virgin, register from 1580: living, a vicarage. Other churches and chapels: 2 Congregational; Primitive Methodist; Wesleyan; Baptist. Schools: Grammar; National; British. 2 banks. Market day: Friday. Cattle market on Monday; wool fair, end of June; Sheep fair, Nov. 17. 2 weekly papers. Corporation: mayor, 4 alderman, 12 councillors. Gives title of viscount to earl of Suffolk and Berkshire.

Andover is not a place with any very decided claims to be accounted picturesque; it is in effect nothing more than a busy little market town, the centre of an agricultural district. Still there are points of view whence Andover, at the ford of the Ann or Ande (hence Andover), is well worth looking at, and as the train leaves Andover junction on the London and South Western railway and goes swinging around the long curve on the Southampton line to Andover Town station, the traveller can easily behold one of them. The church tower in the higher part of the picture, with long lines of houses falling away from it to north and south, the river Anton flowing sluggishly between the railway and the town—such a scene, in the judgment of at least one observer, merits the tribute of something more than a passing glance.

It is a very ancient borough indeed that stretches along the wooded valley of the Anton, and spreads itself over the hillsides, the principal town in the northern part of Hampshire, and a place of some little commercial importance. It is situated on the ancient Roman road from Salisbury to Gilchester, some eighteen miles west from Basingstoke and about as far eastward from Salisbury, and in Saxon days was a royal residence, and the scene of more than one meeting of the Witenagemot. Olaf Tryggvason was entertained at Andover in 988 by Ethelred who induced his Norwegian guest to be baptized and confirmed by Alphege, the archbishop of Canterbury, and in token of his change of heart Olaf vowed never to visit England as an enemy. In the nineteen doleful years of King Stephen, Andover suffered much, and was burned in 1141. In the eighteenth century the place was frequently heard of in electioneering struggles, its inhabitants sharing with those of its neighbour Stockbridge, the dubious reputation of being not beyond the influence of a bribe where votes were concerned.

"Sir Francis Blake Delaval," writes a Quarterly Reviewer, "of the fine old Norman Delavals, the rake and humorist of about a century ago, was one time canvassing Andover. There was a voter there, as far as every appearance went, insensible to every temptation. Money, wine, place, flattery, had no attractions for the stoic. Sir Francis puzzled himself in endeavouring to discover the man's weak point. At last he found it out. The man had never seen a fire-eater and doubted if there existed a class endowed with that remarkable power. Off went Delaval to London and he returned with Angelo in a postchaise. Angelo exerted all his genius. Fire poured from his mouth and nostrils—fire which melted that iron nature and sent it off cheerfully to poll for Delaval."

Three fairly broad and compactly built streets constitute the larger portion of Andover. One of these, in which is the spacious inn of The White Hart, extends eastward from the railway station across the Anton to the long as well as broad market place, an area lined on three of its sides with shops, inns, a bank or two, and lesser establishments. At its upper, or northern end, stands the town hall, erected in 1825, in the classical style then popular; a large stone structure with an open arcaded lower story, and above this a hall seating three hundred people, a council chamber and other rooms. The front of the building displays the town clock. Among the arches of the ground story a corn market is held on Friday, and on Mondays a cattle market is in progress at the Masons Arms in Winchester street. At the left of the town hall a street diverges to the eastward, while at the right the High street proceeds leisurely up the hill toward the parish church. In this thoroughfare are to be seen more shops and a rather imposing Baptist chapel of stone and white brick. At the crest of the hill the street appears to pause and then wanders slowly down the northern slope toward the junction station a half-mile distant. Just where it lingers, as it were, the church may be seen within its spacious churchyard that is reached by a flight of steps from the roadway.

It is a modern stone building in the First Pointed style, with tall western tower, nave, aisles, transepts and apsidal east end. The interior displays an elaborate scheme of color decoration, is lavishly adorned with carvings and very distinctly conveys the impression that it must have cost a lot of money. And so it did, for Dr. William Stanley Goddard, a former headmaster of Winchester college, and long the vicar of Andover, spent in 1848 the sum of thirty thousand pounds in building this church of Saint Mary. It is commodious and apparently comfortable, but it is by no means an admirable specimen of Victorian Gothic, although the three-sided apse is rather an effective exterior feature, as the illustration of the southern side of the church (see frontispiece), serves to show. The writer, recalling engravings of the church destroyed to make room for the present one, is hardly disposed to commend without reserve the church building zeal of the Rev. William Goddard.

Two curious old tombs taken from the ancient church are preserved in the modern one, the first displaying kneeling effigies of a man and a woman on opposite sides, the second dated 1611, showing a seated male effigy on the left, and on the right seven other figures kneeling. The late and much enriched Norman doorway from the old church, placed between two houses in the High street, now forms an entrance to the churchyard. The tower of Saint Mary's, containing a clock and peal of eight bells, rises high above the trees about it and may be seen for many miles. A priory attached to the abbey of Saint Florence at Samur, to which the Andover establishment once belonged ere alien priories were done away with in the reign of Henry the Fifth, was built here by the Conqueror, and a bit of ivy-clad wall in the churchyard still indicates its position.

Crossing the churchyard by one of its broad, shaded paths one comes to East street in which are several dignified residences, and the Congregational church, built in 1700, but with an organization reaching back to 1662. It was enlarged in 1879, and will seat about six hundred persons. The street extends for some considerable distance to the northeast of the parish church, losing caste rapidly as it proceeds, for the thatched cottages that thickly line its course are plainly the homes of the poor. Some of the poorest, indeed, are sheltered in Marlborough street, where, in 1686, John Pullen, esq., founded an almshouse for six poor men. Another similar shelter for four poor women is situated in the Common Acre. Four would appear to be a favorite number with Andover benefactors, since the town has two more almshouses intended for four women each.

Perhaps a more practical charity is the Cottage Hospital in the Junction Road. It was built in 1876 and receives forty or more patients yearly, some of whom come no doubt from the Waterloo foundry at the foot of Bury hill. In New street is the endowed Grammar school founded so long ago as 1569, and attended by one hundred boys. Like many another small English town, and, alas! very unlike many a small New England town, Andover possesses public swimming baths, for in Old England the public bath precedes the public library.

Inns and public houses are pretty generally distributed throughout the town. Beside the more pretentious hostleries of the White Hart, and the Star and Garter, the thirsty man might wander on to The Chequers, The Catherine Wheel, The New Inn, or The Waterloo. Or, if none of these proved to his mind he might enter The Globe or The Wellington, patronize the King's Head or be received into the embrace of The Foresters' or the Masons' Arms. Yet, as such things go, however, the number of public houses in Andover, in spite of its several breweries, is rather less than is sometimes found in places of the same size, though more than one would expect to perceive flourishing in the shade of Phillips Academy or the Theological Seminary in the town over seas on the banks of the Shawshine.

To the archæologist the vicinity of Andover is very interesting, for all about are not to mention the Roman camp on Bury hill two miles southwest, and the large camp still nearer, at Folksbury. From the former locality a fine view of the town may be had, and under the hill is Abbot's Ann, with its brick church built in 1716, by the founder of the Chatham family, Governor Pitt. Another nearby spot offering extended prospects is the recreation ground called The Lady's Mile

"Grey downs with Danish barrows,"

Within the limits of the municipal borough are the hamlets of Hatherden, Wildhern, Smannell or Swanhill, Little London, Woodhouse, East Anton and Charlton. There is a Baptist chapel at Smannell, and a Primitive Methodist one at Charlton. Andover was incorporated under King John and sent two members to parliament under Edward first and Edward second and from the twenty-seventh year of Elizabeth's reign until 1867. It then sent but one until 1885, when its representation was merged in that of the county.

It was for this Hampshire borough that the Massachusetts Andover was named, the English locality having been the home of some of the principal personages in the new settlement. The town of Andover, New Hampshire, bore the name of New Breton till 1779, and was then renamed as a compliment, in all probability, to the Massachusetts town. The three other New England Andovers, in Maine, Vermont and Connecticut, very possibly trace their names to the same source. Beyond New England the name occurs in the states of Illinois, Kansas, Missouri, New Jersey, New York and Ohio.

BRADSTREET GENEALOGY.

Gov. SIMON BRADSTREET¹,* baptized at Horbling parish, Lincolnshire, England, March 18, 1603-4. He went to Emmanuel college a year, and at the age of sixteen was tutor or governor of young Lord Rich, son of the earl of Warwick. On the death of his father, Simon entered the service of the earl of Lincoln as assistant of steward Thomas Dudley, at Sempringham, where he staid eight years. In 1628, he married Thomas Dudley's daughter Ann. Later he was steward for the dowager countess of Warwick. Concluding to remove to America, he joined the Winthrop company, and was chosen an assistant before they left England. He was secretary of the Massachusetts Bay colony from his arrival in America, in 1630, to 1643; assistant, 1630-1678; deputy governor, 1678, 1679; governor, 1679-1686, 1689-1692. He lived in Salem, 1630, 1631; Cambridge, 1631-1638; Ipswich, 1639-1643; Andover, 1644-1673; Boston, 1674-1690; and Salem, 1695-1697. His wife Ann died in Andover Sept. 16, 1672, aged sixty. She was the first American poetess. He married, second, Ann (Downing), widow of Capt. Joseph Gardner of Salem, in 1676; the antenuptial agreement being dated May 7, 1676. Governor Bradstreet died in Salem March 27, 1697, at the age of ninety-four, being called "the nestor of New England." His second wife survived him, being known as "Madam Bradstreet," and died in Salem April 19, 1713, aged seventy-nine. See sketch of Governor Bradstreet in The Antiquarian, volume II, page 159.

*It is stated on good authority that Governor Bradstreet was a son of Rev. Simon Bradstreet, vicar of Horbling, Lincolnshire, England. The children of the father were baptized at Horbling, probably by himself, as follows: Samuel, Sept. 19, 1602; Simon, March 18, 1604; Mercy, March 9, 1606; John, Feb. 8, 1607. Rev. Simon Bradstreet, the father, was a fellow of Emmanuel college, bred as a puritan, and joined the Non-conformist party. He died there Feb. 9, 1621, and his wife Margaret made her will in 1631, probably dying soon afterward.

The first of these is the fact that the majority of the cases of influenza are reported from the United States and Europe. This is not surprising, since these regions have the most extensive systems of public health reporting. The second fact is that the majority of the cases are reported from the winter months. This is also not surprising, since the weather is generally colder and the people are more likely to be indoors, where the virus can spread more easily. The third fact is that the majority of the cases are reported from the lower social classes. This is also not surprising, since these people are more likely to live in crowded conditions and have less access to medical care.

The fourth fact is that the majority of the cases are reported from the urban areas. This is also not surprising, since these areas have a higher population density and are more likely to have a large number of cases. The fifth fact is that the majority of the cases are reported from the military. This is also not surprising, since the military has a high degree of organization and is more likely to have a large number of cases.

The sixth fact is that the majority of the cases are reported from the hospitals. This is also not surprising, since these institutions have a high degree of organization and are more likely to have a large number of cases. The seventh fact is that the majority of the cases are reported from the general public. This is also not surprising, since this is the largest group of people and is more likely to have a large number of cases.

The eighth fact is that the majority of the cases are reported from the United States. This is also not surprising, since the United States has the most extensive system of public health reporting. The ninth fact is that the majority of the cases are reported from Europe. This is also not surprising, since Europe has a high degree of organization and is more likely to have a large number of cases.

The tenth fact is that the majority of the cases are reported from the winter months. This is also not surprising, since the weather is generally colder and the people are more likely to be indoors, where the virus can spread more easily.

The petition was granted March 7, 1778; but Mr. Blaney probably did not return to Massachusetts as he was living in Yarmouth four years later. See Annals of Yarmouth, N. S.

SALEM IN 1700. NO. 27.

BY SIDNEY PERLEY.

The map on page 69 comprises that part of Salem which is now included within Liberty, Essex and Central streets, and the South river. It is based on actual surveys and title deeds, and is drawn on a scale of two hundred feet to an inch.

Liberty street was laid out over land of Maj. William Hathorne as far down as the present Charter street before May 7, 1661.* The way was extended to the river, as provided May 7, 1661, in the deed of Samuel Pickman to John Pickman: "Highway to be left on east side, same width as that said Maj. William Hathorne hath now left out between his fence and farmer John Porter.* This way was laid out as a new way to the cemetery at the time the land between the burial place and the water on the south and west sides was granted and laid out to several parties March 6, 1661. In 1669, the town made this lane a public way; and 20:10:1669, Mr. Eleaz Hathorne was granted land "for the land wh now maketh the highway from his house to the buringe place." 26:6:1669, the town granted to Samuel Pickman land for "the priueledge of the highway next to his land." This way was called the town lane in 1671; lane or highway, 1679; ye lane going to burying point, 1689; ye burying place lane, 1750; burying point lane, 1757; and Liberty street in 1795.

Essex street was an original highway. It was called ye street that comes from the neck direct to the meeting house in Salem in 1655; the street that goes straight to ye meeting house, 1667; ye main street, 1683; the main street of Salem, 1723; and Essex street in 1824.

That part of Central street which lies between Essex and Charter streets was an original highway to the water; and was called ye street in 1667; highway, 1689; ye highway which leads down to Colonel Browne's wharf, 1722; Ingalls' lane leading from the main street to ye South river, 1760; Ingalls' lane, 1763; a street leading from the Sun tavern so called which is in the main street to the South river, 1785; Market street, 1795; and Central street in 1835. That part of the street lying between Charter street and the point of land was one of the original ways reserved along the water front in the original lay out of the settlement, and was the way to Burying point in the earliest days. When the grants of the lots lying to the south of the lot of Hannah Sanders were made in 1661 a way ten feet wide was expressly reserved. This part was called a highway in 1698; a street or way leading to the wharves of William Gray, Ashby, and others, 1714; a way, 1760; a way leading to the South river, 1787; the street leading from the Sun tavern to the South river, 1792; Fish street, 1794; Derby street, 1873; and Central street in 1880.

Derby street was the way reserved along the water in the first settlement of the town; and when the grants of the lots there were made in 1661 a way ten feet wide was reserved expressly. This was called a highway in 1761; a town way or highway, 1763; Water street, 1810; and Derby street about 1856.

Charter street runs where the dotted lines are shown on the map between the braces marked "a". This was laid out just before April 4, 1767, when it was called a new town way. It was called a highway in 1784; the street leading by the burying point so called, 1787; and Charter street in 1794.

*Essex Registry of Deeds, book 8, leaf 2, and book 9, leaf 131.

The South river was so called in 1636; Salem river, 1686; ye river, 1687; ye salt water, 1695; and that part near the western end of Charter street was called ye cove in 1749.

In the sketches that follow after 1700, titles and deeds referred to pertain to the houses and land under and adjoining and not always to the whole lot, the design being, after that date, to give the history of the houses then standing principally.

Ye Burying Point. That part of the burial ground lying south and west of the dashes, being the largest section of the burying ground as marked on the map, was the original burying point, and before the grants of the land adjoining on the south and west to the water were made in 1661, it extended to the river on those sides. On this part, at a town meeting held 14: 6: 1637, John Horne was allowed a pece of grownd for a winde mill vpon or nere the buriall place." 25: 1: 1639, it was voted that Mr. Horne "desist from his inclosure in y^e buryall place: and y^t y^e town shall pay for a quarter of an acre when he hath bought y^e same, except the Towne when they shall haue changed the buryall place shall allow him a portion of the same."* This was called the windmill field in 1652. 23: 10: 1661, the selectmen were ordered by the town to "grant liberty for shops to be builded below ye bank at the buring pt."*

In connection with the grants laid out by the selectmen 6: 1 mo: 1661, it was ordered by the selectmen "that all the bigger lotts that are for ware houses shall leaue a sufficyent way of ten foote broode betweene their houses and the banke and the lesfer lotts that are for shoppes shall leaue a sufficyent way of ten foote brode before theyer houses or shoppes and those 3 shoppes laide out together are foe to

That section of the burial place lying west and north of the dashes, as shown on the map, was undoubtedly purchased of Henry Bartholmew as it was voted by the town 9: 1 mo: 1668-9.

For twenty pounds, Edward Grove conveyed to the town for an enlargement of the cemetery the strip of land lying east-erly of the dashes 26: 9: 1669, in accordance with a vote passed by the town 9: 1 mo: 1668-9: "Bought of Edward Grove all that peell of land of his lying next our Comon Burringe place neare Jno pickman on the East, for and in Consideration of twenty pounds in hand paid.† This strip of land early belonged to John Friend of Salem, carpenter, and he conveyed it to Edward Prescott of London, merchant, July 15, 1652.‡ Capt. Richard Moore of Salem, mariner, brought suit against Mr. Prescott in 1658, judgment was obtained and execution sued out thereon. In satisfaction of the judgment, this lot was assigned to Captain Moore, who conveyed it to Edward Grove of Salem, sailmaker, Jan. 17, 1667.§

That part of the cemetery bounding on Liberty street was purchased of Samuel Pickman for an entrance to the burial place from Liberty street, 26: 6: 1669: "Agreed with Samll pickman Marinr that for a quantitie of land of his that Runeth by a streight line by ye land wee ex-

The selectmen let to Mr. John Cromwell Feb. 24, 1680, "the hearbadge of the towns land at the Burying poynt for Seauen yeares from the Date hearof; Improving it for grasing to his Best Advantag Except Swine which wee allow not of. . . Always provided that the towne hath the Same liberty for Buriall as before this Agreement."*

The cemetery was again enlarged immediately following the laying out of Charter street in 1767. The town bought, June 13, 1767, of William Lander of Salem, chairmaker, the southern end of the lot marked "John Pilgrim" on the map,† and of Joseph Mottey of Salem, mariner, the eastern two-thirds of the southern end of the lot marked "Estate of Timothy Lindall,"‡ being those parts of the lots lying between the new highway (Charter street) and the burial place.

This ancient burial place, used as early as 1637, was called ye burying place in 1652; ye common or burying place, 1667; the common burying place, 1669; ye burying point, 1679; the point burying place, 1794; the burying ground, 1807; and the burying ground point, 1820.

Estate of Eleazer Hathorne Lot. Major William Hathorne owned this lot as early as 1653. He conveyed it to his son Eleazer Hathorne of Salem, together with "my dwelling house standing thereon," Dec. 28, 1664.§ To carry out a certain marriage agreement, Eleazer Hathorne conveyed the house (which he called "my dwelling house") and lot to his wife Abigail, who was daughter of Capt. George Corwin of Salem, March 20, 1671.|| Mr. Hathorne died, and his widow married, secondly, James Russell, esq., of Charlestown. The house was burned in the great fire of 1698. Mr. and Mrs. Russell and her children: William Hathorne and Samuel Hathorne, mariners, and Abigail, wife of John Rayner, mariner, all of Charlestown, conveyed the land, for eighty pounds, to Capt John Browne of Salem, merchant, June 11, 1702.*

William Hirst Lot. There was a dwelling house and shop upon this lot of land in 1651; and the land was owned by Alexander Field of Salem, cordwinder, as early as 1649. Mr. Field probably lived in this house; and, for forty-five pounds, conveyed the house and land to William Venus 3: 12 mo: 1651.† Mr. Venus lived in this house; and, for a similar consideration, conveyed the house, shop, cellar and land "thereto belonging near the windmill field in Salem, to John Miller of Salem, tailor, 16: 12: 1652.‡ Mr. Miller lived here, and, for fifty pounds, conveyed the house and land to Mr. George Corwin of Salem, merchant, 29: 6: 1657.§ Captain Corwin sold the house and lot to Edward Grove of Salem, sailmaker, who paid him for the estate, though no deed passed. Mr. Grove conveyed the house and lot, for two hundred and ten pounds, to William Hirst of Salem, merchant, March 17, 1684-5.|| Capt. Corwin had died that winter, without executing a deed of the premises; and his administrator gave a deed of the estate to Mr. Grove and his heirs and assigns April 30, 1685.¶ The house was burned down in the great fire in 1698. Mr. Hirst continued to own the land until his decease, in 1717.

John Pilgrim Lot. This lot was the eastern half of the two-acre lot of a Mr. Webb of London, England. The whole lot came into the ownership of William Lord of Salem, cutler, before 6: 6: 1655, when, for twenty pounds, he conveyed the entire lot of two acres to Robert Brett of Salem.* This part of the lot came into the possession of Henry Bartholmew of Salem, merchant; and he removed to Boston. In consideration of love, he conveyed it to his son-in-law, John Pilgrim of Salem, merchant, and his wife Elizabeth, Aug. 26, 1681.† Major Pilgrim erected upon the lot a dwelling house in which he lived until it was burned down in the great fire of 1698. He retained the land but a short time after the fire.

Estate of Timothy Lindall Houses.

That part of this lot lying easterly of the dashes was the western part of the two-acre lot that belonged to a Mr. Webb of London, England. It came into the ownership of William Lord of Salem, cutter, before 6:6:1655, when, for twenty pounds, he conveyed the entire lot of two acres to Robert Brett of Salem.* Mr. Brett (or, Britt) called himself a planter, and, for seven pounds and ten shillings, conveyed this half of the lot to Henry Bartholmew of Salem 9:6 mo:1655.† Upon this part of the lot Mr. Bartholmew, who was a merchant, erected a dwelling house before 1661. Mr. Bartholmew lived here until he removed to Boston, where he was also a merchant.

The small strip lying west of the dashes was a part of the house lot of John Holgrave very early. It subsequently came into the hands of Richard Prince, who conveyed it to Henry Bartholmew.

Mr. Bartholmew thus became the owner of the entire lot, and he conveyed the lot and house to Timothy Lindall of Salem, merchant, Feb. 7, 1679-80.‡ The great fire of 1698 began in a warehouse situated at the northeasterly corner of this lot, where the Museum building now stands. The old house stood westwardly of it as shown on the map. Mr. Lindall was building a new house on the site of the warehouse at the time of his death, Jan. 6, 1698-9. The other house was called "the old house" in the inventory of his estate, taken in the spring of 1699, and it was probably removed when the new house was completed. The estate remained in the possession of the widow of Mr. Lindall until her death Jan. 7, 1731-2. The estate was not divided until 1737. Samuel Barnard, esquire, and wife Rachel, Benjamin Morshed, mariner, and wife Sarah, widow Sarah Williams, and Edward Rose, mariner, and wife Mary, all of Salem, and Nathan Phippen of Boston, mariner, children and grandchildren of Timothy Lindall, deceased, conveyed their interests in the house and land around it to James Lindall, esquire, of Salem, a son of said deceased, Feb. 10, 1737.* James Lindall died May 10, 1753, intestate. The inventory of his estate shows that the house contained a kitchen, hall, hall chamber, hall chamber garret, parlor, parlor chamber, garret over the parlor chamber shops, shop chambers and shop chamber garrets. It was called his mansion house, being valued with the land that ran back to the cemetery at £476, 13s., 4d. In the division of the estate it was assigned to his son James Lindall. The son died the next year, Aug. 19, 1754, being also a merchant, without issue. In the division of his estate the house and land around it were assigned to his only brother Timothy Lindall of Salem, merchant. Mr. Lindall conveyed "my mansion house," barn and land to Joseph Mottey of Salem, mariner, June 18, 1763.† For four hundred and sixty-six pounds, thirteen shillings and four pence, Mr. Mottey conveyed the land and house, "in which Rev. Nathaniel Whitaker now lives," to John Gardner of Salem, gentleman, Feb. 24, 1772.‡ Capt. Gardner died Jan. 15, 1784, intestate; and his administrator conveyed to George Peele of Salem, trader, the two southwest rooms and the two chambers over them and part of the lot of land Nov. 25, 1786.* The remainder of the house was set off to the widow of the deceased, Mary Gardner, and in 1793 the house was occupied by Capt. George Smith and a Mr. White, a tallow chandler. Captain Gardner had two children living at the time of his decease. Mary Lemon, the daughter, apparently conveyed one-half of her half interest in the estate to her mother; and her brother, John Gardner, who inherited the other half, died possessed of it Oct. 27, 1805, having by his will devised it to his son Samuel P. Gardner. Mrs. Lemon and her husband, William Lemon of Boston, upholsterer, conveyed her remaining fourth interest to Samuel P. Gardner, esquire, of Salem, Feb. 7, 1814.† George Peele died possessed of his part of the estate in 1801, intestate; and it descended to his sister, the widow Mary Gardner, who had the dower interest in the remainder of the estate. She conveyed this part of the estate to John Andrew of Salem May 7, 1824;‡ and her other interests to Mr. Andrew on the same day.§ Samuel P. Gardner conveyed his interest in the estate to Mr. Andrew May 22, 1824.§ Mr. Andrew, for four thousand dollars, conveyed the land and buildings to The East India Marine Hall Corporation July 22, 1824.¶ The corporation removed the house immediately, and on its site erected the present home of the Peabody Academy of Science, commonly known as the Museum building.

Nehemiah Willoughby House. John Holgrave owned this house and lot in 1655. Richard Prince owed the estate, and conveyed it, probably, with the house thereon to Henry Bartholmew, sr., of Salem, merchant. For love, Mr. Bartholmew conveyed the estate to his son-in-law Nehemiah Willoughby of Salem, merchant, and wife Abigail, own daughter of Mr. Bar-tholmew, Feb. 14, 1683.* Mr. Willoughby was then living in the house. He died Nov. 6, 1702; his wife, Abigail, having died two months previously. The house and lot descended to their eldest son Francis Willoughby of Salem, merchant, who, for one hundred and fifty pounds, conveyed the house, garden and land to Thomas Barton of Salem, apothecary, Feb. 6, 1710-1.† Colonel Barton took the old house down.

Estate of Samuel Shattock House. This house was occupied by John Bourne before 1655. William Browne of Salem, merchant, owned the house and land April 13, 1655, when, for thirty-six pounds, he conveyed the estate to Samuel Shattock of Salem.‡ Mr. Shattock lived here until his death, June 6, 1689, at the age of sixty-nine. From this house he was banished in 1660, and from it went to England and obtained from King Charles II., the mandate that caused the terrible Quaker persecution to cease. Mr. Shattock conveyed this house and lot to his wife Hannah Shattock for her life, and then to their children. She died Sept. 14, 1701, at the age of seventy-seven; and, Nov. 1, 1701, by agreement of the children the house and land became the estate of the son, Samuel Shattock. The house and land were then valued at forty-five pounds. The house was standing in 1721, and gone in 1723, when Mr. Shattock died possessed of the land.

John Browne Lot. Robert Gutch of Salem owned this land in 1655, and probably in 1651, when he mortgaged his estate to William Norton.§ He mortgaged his estate, a second time, to Mr. Norton Dec. 22, 1652;|| and Mr. Norton assigned the mortgage to Nicholas Davison June 6, 1653.¶ Mr. Davison assigned it to Richard Gardner Nov. 26, 1656.¶ There was a warehouse upon the lot in 1667 and 1669, when the estate was owned by William Browne. Mr. Browne died Jan. 20, 1687; and the estate descended to his son John Browne, who owned it in 1700.

Estate of Edward Mould House. Robert Gutch of Salem owned this house and lot in 1655, and probably in 1651, when he mortgaged his house and lot, to William Norton.* He mortgaged his house and lot, for forty pounds, a second time, to Mr. Norton Dec. 22, 1652.† For twenty-six pounds, Mr. Norton assigned the mortgage to Nicholas Davison June 6, 1653;‡ and Mr. Davison, for twenty-two pounds, assigned it to Richard Gardner Nov. 26, 1656.‡ Mr. Gardner was a mariner and lived in this house. He conveyed the house and lot as far south as the dashes, except "the new shop with the seller under it," to Edward Mould of Salem, fisherman, Aug. 25, 1667;§ and the house and whole of the lot, including the shop, May 5, 1669.‡ Edward Nichols of Clovelly, Devonshire, England, mariner, and his sister Mary Nichols, grandchildren and only surviving heirs of Elizabeth Nichols (alias Elizab. Baron), who was sister and heiress of Edward Mould of Salem, mariner and bonesetter, deceased, for fifty pounds conveyed this "old wooden cottage or dwelling house" and lot to Stephen Ingalls of Salem, tailor, Feb. 1, 1721-2.|| Mr. Ingalls took the house down before 1725.

Estate of Thomas Elliot House. Nathaniel Pickman owned this lot as early as 1655. He was a house-carpenter and built a house upon it for his step-son Anthony Dike, a seaman, and Mr. Dike lived in the house when Mr. Pickman conveyed the house and lot to him, July 10, 1670.¶ Mr. Dike died in or before 1679, possessed of the estate, which was then valued at fifty pounds. His widow Margery married, secondly, John Polin in 1688, and by order of court the house and lot became the property of his son Anthony Dike of Salem, tailor. For forty-one pounds and ten shillings, Mr. Dike conveyed the estate to Col. Bartholmew Gedney of Salem Dec. 16, 1689.* For forty-six pounds and ten shillings, Colonel Gedney conveyed the house and lot to Thomas Elliot of Salem, mariner, July 6, 1693.† Mr. Elliot died in 1694, when the house and land were appraised at forty pounds. His widow and administratrix, Hannah Elliot, and her son (?) Francis Elliot, husbandman, for twenty-five pounds, conveyed the house and land to widow Mary Lindall of Salem May 19, 1703.‡ The house probably stood but a short time after that date, being gone before 1737.

Estate of Timothy Lindall Lot. Nathaniel Pickman of Salem, house-carpenter, owned this house and lot as early as 1655. He died in 1684, possessed of the estate, which was then valued at sixty pounds. The house was occupied by his son Nathaniel Pickman, and to him and his children the arbitrators, whom the children of the deceased, namely, Nathaniel Pickman, John Sanders, Mary Hodges, Bethiah Hill and Edino: Feveryeare, appointed to make a division of the estate, conveyed the house and land within the dashes Jan. 31, 1687-8.§ The arbitrators conveyed the remainder of the lot to Timothy Lindall of Salem, merchant, March 25, 1689.|| Mr. Pickman, the son, apparently died, and his children, John Baker and wife Tabitha, and Elizabeth Pickman, singlewoman, all of Boston, Nathaniel Pickman, mariner, of Salem, and Joseph Pickman, Benjamin Pickman, Isannah Pickman, Hannah Pickman, Mary Pickman and Abigail Pickman, for thirteen pounds and ten shillings, conveyed the "small old decayed dwelling house" and the land within the dashes to Mr. Lindall June 16, 1698.* The house was removed before the year was out. Mr. Lindall died Jan. 6, 1698-9; and the estate came into the hands of his widow, Mary Lindall, who owned it many years.

Joseph Allen House. This lot belonged to Nathaniel Pickman in 1655. Between 1689 and 1692, he conveyed the land to Zebulon Hill; and Mr. Hill, who was of Salem and a cooper, for twenty pounds, conveyed the lot to Joseph Allen of Salem, joiner, April 15, 1695.† Mr. Allen erected a house on the lot; and died April 19, 1710, possessed of the house and lot. He devised the estate to his wife Abigail for her life with power of disposal for her support, and then, if not sold, to his son Robert Allen. The house and lot were then appraised at one hundred and fifty pounds. The widow conveyed the house and lot to her said son, Robert Allen of Salem, joiner, June 5, 1749.‡ Mr. Allen probably removed the house some time before his death which occurred in 1780.

Philip Hill Lot. Nathaniel Pickman, sr., of Salem, carpenter, owned this land as early as 1655; and he died in the autumn of 1684. His administrator conveyed that part of the lot lying south of the dashes to John Hill of Salem, cooper, April 2, 1686;§ and he conveyed the remainder of the lot to Mr. Hill Feb. 15, 1686-7.|| Mr. Hill died in the spring of 1691, having devised this lot, with a shop and wharf, to his wife, Priscilla Hill. The land and buildings were then valued at thirty pounds. Mrs. Hill conveyed the same estate to Philip Hill of Salem, cooper, Nov. 22, 1692;¶ and Mr. Hill owned it in 1700.

Bethiah Cole House. Nathaniel Pickman, sr., of Salem, carpenter, owned this lot as early as 1655. He conveyed it, as a gift, to his daughter, widow Bethiah Silsby Feb. 2, 1679-80.* Her dwelling house then stood upon the land. She married Alexander Cole before Sept. 17, 1683, when her father conveyed to her, "for the conveniences of a wharf," the strip of land down to the water as shown on the map.* Mr. Cole died June 27, 1687; and after the decease of Mrs. Cole the estate descended to their son Abraham Cole, a mariner, who removed to Boston before Dec. 12, 1710, when, for ninety pounds, he conveyed the house and lot, with the twelve feet passage to the highway and water, to Mighill Bacon of Salem, shipwright.† Mr. Bacon mortgaged the house and lot to his wife's father, Samuel Shattock of Salem, feltmaker, March 6, 1710-1.‡ Mr. Shattock evidently foreclosed the mortgage; though he permitted the Bacon's to live there. Mr. Shattock died early in 1723; and he devised the house and land to his daughter, Mrs. Margaret Bacon, who still lived there. He had built a barn upon the lot; and the house, barn and land were then appraised at one hundred and fifty pounds. The administrator of Mr. Shattock's estate, conveyed the land and buildings, for sixty-nine pounds, to John Higginson of Salem, shopkeeper, Nov. 30, 1726.§ For a similar consideration, Mr. Higginson conveyed the estate to Mr. Shattock's son John Shattock of Salem, mariner, who was the administrator, March 13, 1727.|| Mr. Shattock, for one hundred and twenty pounds, conveyed this "my dwelling house" and land to Mihill Bacon and Samuel Bacon, both of Salem, shipwrights, Feb. 21, 1733.¶ Samuel Bacon apparently conveyed his interest in the estate to his brother Mihill (they being sons of the former owner) before Feb. 19, 1749, when Mihill Bacon, for four hundred and twenty-six pounds, conveyed the estate to Benjamin Pickman of Salem, esquire.* Mr. Bacon then called the house "my now dwelling house." How much longer the house stood is not known.

Hannah Sanders Lot. That part of this lot lying northerly of the dashes belonged to Nathaniel Pickman, sr., of Salem, carpenter, as early as 1655. He conveyed this lot to his son-in-law John Sanders of Salem, mariner, and his wife Hannah Sanders, daughter of Mr. Pickman, as a gift, Dec. 31, 1681.†

That part of the lot lying southerly of the dashes was granted by the town of Salem and laid out to Abraham Cole 6: 1 mo: 1661; and it came into the hands of Mr. Sanders soon afterward.

Mr. Sanders died June 9, 1694; and his widow was the owner of the land in 1700.

Estate of Timothy Lindall Lot. This lot originally constituted four lots, as shown on the map, being separated by the dashes, and all granted by the town of Salem and laid out 6: 1 mo: 1661, as follows: the northern one to Henry Bartholomew, the next to John Browne, the ruling elder, the next to Mr. Price, and the next to Zebulon Hill for a shop. Mr. Bartholomew removed to Boston before Feb. 7, 1679-80, when he conveyed his warehouse, wharf, etc., to Timothy Lindall of Salem, merchant.‡ John Browne gave his lot to his son James Browne, who died before a deed was passed, and John Browne then sold it to John Marston, who sold it to John Pilgrim of Salem, merchant, but no deed had yet passed. Mr. Browne gave a deed of it to Mr. Pilgrim Nov. 26, 1680.§ Mr. Pilgrim apparently conveyed it to Mr. Lindall soon afterward. The other lots came into the hands of Mr. Lindall, but the deeds have not been found. Mr. Lindall died Jan. 6, 1698-9, possessed of the entire lot, it being valued, with the wharf and warehouse, at one hundred pounds. The property remained in his estate until 1737, when it was divided.

David Phippen Lot. This lot originally constituted four lots, separated on the map by the dashes, all having been granted by the town of Salem and laid out 6: 1 mo: 1661, as follows: the northern one to William Lake, the next to Samuel Williams, the next to Edmund Batter and the next to John Brown (son of Mr. William Browne). No deeds have been found from William Lake and John Browne to Mr. Phippen of Salem, shipwright, but they were evidently conveyed very early; Samuel Williams conveyed his lot to him in or before 1679; and Mr. Batter, for fifty shillings, conveyed his lot to Mr. Phippen May 3, 1679.* Mr. Phippen owned these lots in 1700.

William Gedney Lot. This lot was granted by the town of Salem and laid out to John Gedney for a warehouse lot 6: 1 mo: 1661. Mr. Gedney died possessed of it Aug. 5, 1688, and it descended to his grandson William Gedney, who owned it in 1700.

Abel Gardner Lot. This lot was granted by the town of Salem and laid out 6: 1 mo: 1661, to Samuel Gardner and his brother Capt. Joseph Gardner. Captain Gardner was killed in King Phillip's war Dec. 19, 1675, and his interest in the lot was probably released to his brother Samuel Gardner, who died in 1689, possessed of it. The lot descended to the latter's son Jonathan Gardner, who died about four years later, having devised the lot to his brother Abel Gardner of Salem, yeoman. Abel Gardner owned it in 1700.

William Hirst Lot. That part of this lot lying westerly of the dashes was granted by the town of Salem and laid out 6: 1 mo: 1661, to Serg. John Porter. Sergeant Porter died Sept. 6, 1676, and his widow, who was the executrix of his will, conveyed this lot to her son-in-law, Lt. Thomas Gardner of Salem, June 15, 1680.† Mr. Gardner died Nov. 16, 1695; and his son-in-law, Capt. William Bowditch of Salem, mariner, was the administrator of his estate. Captain Bowditch and his wife Mary, for fifty shillings, conveyed the lot to William Hirst of Salem, merchant, Dec. 31, 1698.*

That part of the lot lying easterly of the dashes was granted by the town of Salem and laid out to Maj. William Hathorne 6: 1 mo: 1661. He died in 1681, possessed of it, and it then came into the possession of his son John Hathorne of Salem, merchant, who, for five pounds, sold it to Mr. Hirst Feb. 16, 1691, but no deed passed until Sept. 8, 1716.†

Mr. Hirst owned the entire lot for many years after 1700.

William Bowditch Lot. Feb. 14, 1680-1, the selectmen of Salem leased to Capt. William Bowditch of Salem, merchant, "all that lower end of that land the Towne purchased of mr. Edw. Grove att or by the burring place viz. from the bank downwards to low watter marke or soe low as the order & custome of the Towne is and According as thay allow unto others that border vpon the water or Riuer."‡ Captain Bowditch owned the lot in 1700 apparently.

John Cromwell Lot. This lot was a part of the lot that Samuel Friend of Manchester conveyed to Samuel Pickman of Salem, mariner, Dec. 24, 1657.§ Mr. Pickman conveyed this part of it to William Bowditch of Salem, merchant, May 23, 1676.¶ Mr. Bowditch conveyed it with his warehouse, cellar, and wharf thereon to Philip Cromwell of Salem, slaughterer, Nov. 20, 1679.¶ Mr. Cromwell died possessed of the property March 30, 1693, and it descended to his son John Cromwell, who died, possessed of it, Sept. 30, 1700. The warehouse was then called "old," and the wharf still there.

Benjamin Pickman Lot. This lot belonged to Samuel Friend of Manchester very early; and he conveyed it to Samuel Pickman of Salem, mariner, Dec. 24, 1657.* For six pounds Mr. Pickman conveyed that part of the lot at the southeast corner within the dashes to John Pickman of Salem, seaman, May 7, 1661.† John Pickman died in the winter of 1683-4, apparently without issue, and this part of the lot was released to his nephew Benjamin Pickman. The remainder of the lot was owned by Samuel Pickman until his death in 1691; and his heirs apparently conveyed it to Benjamin Pickman, who thus became the owner of the whole lot, which he died possessed of after 1700.

Francis Gahtman House. That part of this lot lying easterly of the dashes belonged to Samuel Friend of Manchester very early. Dec. 24, 1657, he conveyed it to Samuel Pickman of Salem.*

That part of the lot lying westerly of the dashes, with the house thereon, belonged to William Goult, who died in the winter of 1659-60, possessed of the property. The administratrix of his estate, for twenty-four pounds, conveyed the house and lot to Mr. Pickman June 12, 1660.‡ The southern end of this lot may have been a part of the lot that Edward Grove conveyed to the town for an enlargement of the cemetery, and a part of which was conveyed to Mr. Pickman for the piece of land they had of him for the same purpose, etc.

Mr. Pickman died in 1685, and the administratrix of his estate conveyed the house and entire lot to Dr. Francis Gahtman of Salem March 8, 1689.§ The house was standing and owned by Doctor Gahtman in 1750; but how much longer it stood has not been learned.

In general court, in suit of Mr. Jn^o Gifford, attorney to Mr. Jn^o Bex & Company,

The first part of the paper discusses the importance of the study of the history of the United States. It is argued that a knowledge of the past is essential for a full understanding of the present. The author then proceeds to a detailed examination of the early years of the Republic, from the time of the signing of the Declaration of Independence to the end of the War of 1812. This section covers the political, social, and economic developments of the period, and the role of the various states in the formation of the new nation.

The second part of the paper deals with the period from 1812 to 1860. This was a time of great change and growth for the United States. The author discusses the expansion of the territory, the development of the economy, and the increasing influence of the federal government. He also examines the social and cultural changes that were taking place, and the role of the various groups in society.

The third part of the paper covers the period from 1860 to 1890. This was a time of rapid industrialization and urbanization. The author discusses the growth of the manufacturing sector, the development of the railroads, and the increasing importance of the federal government. He also examines the social and cultural changes that were taking place, and the role of the various groups in society.

The fourth part of the paper deals with the period from 1890 to 1914. This was a time of great change and growth for the United States. The author discusses the expansion of the territory, the development of the economy, and the increasing influence of the federal government. He also examines the social and cultural changes that were taking place, and the role of the various groups in society.

The fifth part of the paper covers the period from 1914 to 1945. This was a time of great change and growth for the United States. The author discusses the expansion of the territory, the development of the economy, and the increasing influence of the federal government. He also examines the social and cultural changes that were taking place, and the role of the various groups in society.

The sixth part of the paper deals with the period from 1945 to 1960. This was a time of great change and growth for the United States. The author discusses the expansion of the territory, the development of the economy, and the increasing influence of the federal government. He also examines the social and cultural changes that were taking place, and the role of the various groups in society.

The seventh part of the paper covers the period from 1960 to 1980. This was a time of great change and growth for the United States. The author discusses the expansion of the territory, the development of the economy, and the increasing influence of the federal government. He also examines the social and cultural changes that were taking place, and the role of the various groups in society.

The eighth part of the paper deals with the period from 1980 to 1990. This was a time of great change and growth for the United States. The author discusses the expansion of the territory, the development of the economy, and the increasing influence of the federal government. He also examines the social and cultural changes that were taking place, and the role of the various groups in society.

The ninth part of the paper covers the period from 1990 to the present. This was a time of great change and growth for the United States. The author discusses the expansion of the territory, the development of the economy, and the increasing influence of the federal government. He also examines the social and cultural changes that were taking place, and the role of the various groups in society.

The tenth part of the paper deals with the period from the present to the future. This was a time of great change and growth for the United States. The author discusses the expansion of the territory, the development of the economy, and the increasing influence of the federal government. He also examines the social and cultural changes that were taking place, and the role of the various groups in society.

THE OLD ROCKING CHAIR.

BY T. C. HARBAUGH.

It stands over there in the corner alone,
Its varnish is cracked and one rocker is gone;
What's left of its tidy is dusty and brown
And scattered and silent its fringes hang down;
No songster appeareth to warble its praise,
When we were but children it saw its best days;
And many a face that was rosy and fair
Reposed after play in the old rocking chair.

How often in it in the winter nights cold
The tales of the fairies by nurses were told;
How often we listened with kiss-bedewed brow
To lullaby strains that we hear even now;
Aye, far in the past with its sunshine and shade
I hear the sweet sounds that the old rockers made;
And now as I listen I willingly share
The loves of the years with the old rocking chair.

She rests where the roses their love vigils keep
Who fondly and tenderly rocked me to sleep;
But still, when I look in the corner, I trace
Within the old rocker a well-cherished face;
The years that have vanished no more to return
But deeper the joys of a childhood inurn,
And thus doth the past with a halo most fair
Recrown with its beauty the old rocking chair.

No longer to music now fast and now slow
At morning and evening it moves to and fro;
No more from its depths where sweet memories
Throng
With an angelic touch comes a lullaby song;
'Tis covered with dust, but the dust cannot hide
The prints of the hands that will ever abide Upon the old arms so reposeful and fair,
When memory turns to the old rocking chair.

S A L E M, July 18.

Wednesday died at Newbury-Port, Mrs. ELIZABETH GREENLEAF, Consort to BENJAMIN GREENLEAF, Esq; and eldest Daughter to the Rev. Dr. CHAUNCY of Boston.

July 17, 1769, Cadwallador Ford of Wilmington advertised for his indented servant lad Robert Kilby, who had run away. He was of short stature, well set, of a light complexion, brown hair, nearly eighteen years old. He wore when he went away, a brownish colored camblet coat, lined with red, striped linen and woolen jacket, double-breasted, green worsted plush breeches, blue seamed stockings, thick pumps, brass buckles, tow shirt, tow trousers, and felt hat. There was with him Joseph Ross, who was supposed to have run away from Ipswich, and to have said Robert to go with him. They had with them two brownish dogs each about as big as a fox.

BEVERLY, June 24, 1769.

THIS Evening the Remains of the second Wife of the Reverend Mr. CHIPMAN, of the Town, were decently interred, who died in the Morning of the 21st.

His first Wife was sister to the late Col. HALE, of Beverly; a Woman respectable for her Piety, an Ornament to her Sex, a Pattern to her Family, and a Crown to her Husband. By her he had his children, viz. eight Sons, and seven Daughters; three only of which Sons, and five of the Daughters, yet survive.

This his second Wife was Sister to the late Reverend Mr. WARREN, of Wenham; a Woman of excellent Knowledge, especially in the sacred Oracles, and full of Goodness even as the other. Upon her coming into Family, she soon taught the younger Children to esteem and reverence her Person; and by her prudent and constant Exertions for their best Good, fixed them in a steady Course of cheerful and filial Obedience to her, to the End; yea, excited their Gratitude to that Degree, that they seemed ready to expend their own Life for her Relief, in the Time of her Distress.—The Neighbourhood were moved with Grief, as her last Sickness came on. The Gentle women of her Acquaintance, both elder and younger, treated her with the Compassion due to a Sister or Mother in Adversity; sparing no Cost, no Labour, which might minister to her Ease or Comfort. Dying of a Dropsy, her Sufferings were constant, without Intermission, and very tedious for more than six Weeks. She patiently endured them, being animated with a lively Hope of her being present with the Lord as soon as she should be absent from the Body.

the first thing I noticed when I stepped out of the car was the cold. It was a sharp contrast to the warm blanket I had been under. I shivered as I walked towards the entrance of the building. The air was crisp and clear, and I could see the stars in the night sky. The building was large and imposing, with many windows that were lit up. I felt a sense of awe as I approached the entrance. The doorman greeted me with a friendly smile and led me to the elevator. I took the elevator up to the top floor. The room was large and comfortable, with a soft bed and a warm blanket. I felt a sense of relief as I lay down. The room was quiet and peaceful, and I could hear the soft sound of the rain outside. I closed my eyes and fell asleep. The next morning I woke up feeling refreshed and ready to start my day. The room was still quiet, and I could hear the soft sound of the rain outside. I got up and went to the bathroom. The water was warm and comfortable. I took a shower and felt a sense of relaxation. I got dressed and went to the kitchen. There was a note on the table from the chef. It said that my breakfast was ready. I went to the dining room and found a table set for me.
The food was delicious and I ate it with a sense of enjoyment. The day was peaceful and I felt a sense of calm.

ANSWERS.

358. Some years ago I tried to find out where Benjamin Jones of Enfield, Conn., came from, but failed. I look up the work again this year, and found that he came from Gloucester, Mass. He was born in 1651, and died in 1718. The inventory of his estate, dated July, 1718, mentions children, Thomas, Benjamin, Ebenezer, Eleazer and also an heir, John Howard. The settlement by the heirs mentions wife Elizabeth, and states that it does not include any land that belonged "to the estate of the deceased that is in Gloucester." In that way I found that he came from Gloucester. The History of Enfield gives the family record in that town.—R. H. J.

*Probably lived in Meredith, N. H., yeoman, 1794.

358. The family record of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Wildes) Jones is given in the Historical Collections of the Essex Institute, volume XLII, page 150.—Ed.

465. Elizabeth, wife of Aaron Waite of Ipswich, was daughter of Capt. Elias Lowater of Ipswich. Her mother was Elizabeth, daughter of Capt. Stephen and Mary (Eveleth) Perkins of Ipswich, where she was baptized Oct. 18, 1713. Aaron Waite was baptized in Ipswich Dec. 20, 1724. His mother was Ruth, daughter of Joseph Fellows of Ipswich.—Ed.

EARLY PLANTED CROPS.

THE early settlers of Essex county found here in a wild state several varieties of fruits and vegetables that were new to them. There were also many kinds that were like those cultivated in the fields and gardens in England, though here they were less developed than there. The planters brought their own English seeds, and planted them in the untried soil of New England, proving that the new world was capable of producing crops equal to those of the homeland. The wild plants and fruit-bearing shrubs and trees were improved by cultivation, and made to minister to the needs of the immigrants.

The Indians of this section of America were apparently not as nomadic as has been supposed. The localities of their abodes were fixed and certain, the tribes having occupied a somewhat definite territory. They dwelt in settled villages, and cultivated the soil, sometimes on a considerable scale and for a long time on the same spot.

They gathered and used the wild fruits, nuts, grapes, plums, berries, etc., but probably cultivated none of them.

The most important cultivated planted crop of the Indians was maize, or, as the settlers called it, Indian corn, and in our own time known simply as corn. It was raised generally throughout the country; and was indeed of great importance and value to the aborigines. No other cereal or fruit or vegetable was so well adapted to their necessities. The hard hull prevented it from spoiling, and it could be readily carried about their persons. Its parching quality gave it a further advantage, and they did not tire of its flavor. Its cultivation was easy, and increase great.

In our ancient pastures and forests corn-hills may still be seen. While many of these were made by our forefathers, frequently will be found those of the Indians of three hundred years ago. The little hillocks of earth are about three feet apart, and in rows. Only about four stalks were grown in a hill; and the method of cultivation by the Indian was adopted by the English settler. The corn-cribs, or houses, set on posts, which are still to be seen upon farms in various parts of Essex county, was, it is said, the Indian method of preserving their grain from small animals. However this may be, it is certain that the supply of corn on hand not needed for immediate consumption was preserved in holes in the ground. The holes were about the size of an ordinary hogshead, and the corn was kept from contact with the earth by being placed in baskets made of rushes and osiers with mats above and under them. The early English settlers sometimes bought corn of the Indians, being supplied from this source.

The latter fertilized their corn, generally with fish, and sometimes with manure and probably seaweed and vegetable compost. The cultivation of the ground devolved upon women; and the squaws bore the brunt of the exposure and labor from the burning over the ground, to destroy the weeds before the soil was dug up with their hoes made of large clam shells, till the harvest.

Indian corn immediately became the staple crop of the white settlers, who adopted the aboriginal methods in its cultivation, and in the course of centuries have modified them but little. Instead of the ground being slightly stirred by the clam-shell hoe, the English immediately used the iron-strapped wooden plow, and later the sub-soil plow. Fertilizing was increased and hoeing was more thorough and often, the cultivator later on adding to the deeper stirring of the soil. Probably the Indians had no use for the stalks, but the English fed them to cattle.

Husking parties may have been enjoyed among the Indians, and certainly they soon became occasions of great merriment among the colonists.

Shelling corn by hand during the long winter evenings was hard work at any period, whether it was upon the edge of an inverted shovel blade, on the long handle of a frying pan, or a long knife blade set in the edge of a piece of wood. The cobs were used as fuel, in curing hams, giving a delightful flavor to the smoked shoulder.

The settlers also learned from their dusky friends how to pulverize their corn, by pounding in a mortar or grinding between stones. The mortar was a section of the trunk or stump of a tree a foot or more in diameter and three feet in height, hollowed out by burning. The top of the wooden pestle, which was used for pounding the grain, was fastened to the top of a bent young tree, which formed a spring to raise the pestle. This was called a samp mill. Corn was also cracked and broken in this manner. The grist-mill, similar to the modern kind, was soon instituted, not only to grind Indian corn, but wheat, rye, and other grains. Wind-mills were adopted a little while before the water mills, though both appeared very early in the settlements of the early colonists. The Indians ate their corn green as well as ripe. They boiled or roasted the green ears, probably of the sweet variety, with the husks still on; a practice which might be desirable in our own time. From their methods of cooking the ripened grain, we have received ash-cake, hoe-cake, Johnny cake, succotash, samp, hominy, parched corn and hasty pudding.

Parched or popped corn then became known for the first time to the children of the settlements here. Governor Winthrop wrote about 1630 that when corn was parched it turned inside out and was "white and floury within."

Then became known to our forebears the Indian pudding boiled in a bag, and the rye and Indian bread; and hasty pudding, as we know it, was entirely novel.

The Indians also raised cucumbers (or cow-cumbers, or cow-combers), water and musk melons (or, millions, as they were then called), and squashes, which Higginson called "squanter squashes." They also cultivated gourds, the shells of which were employed for storage and carrying or water jugs, dippers, spoons and dishes, for mixing bowls, masks, etc.

They also had pumpkins called by them "pompions." The English settlers cultivated them, planting them among the corn, as the Indians had done, a practice which is still continued here. This vegetable was fruitful, easily grown, easily cooked, and kept well. In the early days they were important as a food supply, being used for sweetening, and dried and ground made into bread. Johnson, in his Wonder-working Providence, called it "A fruit which the Lord fed his people till corn and cattle increased;" and rebuked the colonists for their lack of its appreciation. A colonial poet shows how necessary it was, in his couplet:

"We have pumpkins at morning and pumpkins at noon,
If it were not for pumpkins we should be undone."

Pumpkins were dried in the sun and kept for winter use by both Indians and colonists. They were eaten stewed, and the old-fashioned "pumpkin pie" is still cooked, but the squash has nearly supplanted it.

Beans were abundant and raised by the Indians amongst their corn. These they shelled and preserved dry, as at the present day by their successors. They baked them in earthen pots and the colonists and their descendants have continued the custom ever since. The Indians also had peas, and these, too, have ever been popular with all the residents of New England, whether cooked green or dry. "Pease" are often mentioned in the early records but under this designation beans were probably included.

The Indians had several varieties of edible roots, as turnips, parsnips and carrots; and also onions. There was wild hemp, from which they obtained fibre for cordage and cloth.

Besides all these plants which were growing wild and those which were cultivated by the natives, seeds of various others were brought from England for sowing in our soil, as well as seeds of improved species like those that were American. Most of the new varieties succeeded, being soon adapted to the changed conditions of soil and climate.

The Massachusetts Bay Company provided to be sent to Salem in the winter following the arrival of Endecott a hog's-head each, in the ear, of wheat, rye, barley and oats, beans, peas, woad seed, saffron heads, liquorice seed, madder roots and seed, potatoes, and hemp and flax seed. The potatoes were probably of the sweet variety, which had been introduced into England from the southern American colonies, the officers of the company in England evidently being ignorant that the climate and soil of Salem was hardly adapted to this vegetable of a warmer region.

The general court passed a law May 13, 1648, that no wheat, rye, barley or Indian corn should be transported into any foreign parts, or put aboard any vessel with that intention, under penalty of twenty shillings per bushel, one-half of the penalty to go to the informer. The exportation of corn was again forbidden in 1662. Corn was received for taxes at the following rates per bushel: in 1650, three shillings, 1654, two shillings and eight pence, and in 1655, two shillings and six pence. In 1650 and 1654, wheat and barley were received for taxes at the rate of five shillings per bushel, and rye and peas at four shillings. In 1655, wheat and barley were received at four shillings and six pence, rye at three shillings and six pence, and peas at four shillings per bushel. May 23, 1655, the general court authorized towns to appoint men to measure corn, in cases of dispute that might arise.

John Goffe of Newbury, who died Dec. 9, 1641, had seven bushels of Indian corn on hand, valued at seventeen shillings, and one bushel of wheat, valued at four shillings. Hugh Churchman of Lynn, when the inventory of his estate was taken July 4, 1644, had twenty bushels of wheat, four bushels of Indian corn, two bushels of barley, and corn on the ground. Isabel West of Salem, when her estate was appraised Dec. 30, 1644, had sixteen bushels of Indian corn and five bushels of pease. Robert Pease of Salem, when he died in 1644, had one acre each of wheat, barley, pease and Indian corn; and he was a small farmer. John Talbey of Salem, when the inventory of his estate was taken in January, 1644-5, had twenty bushels of Indian corn, valued at two shillings and six pence a bushel, and three pecks of naked oats, appraised at seven shillings. John Gaines of Lynn, when his estate was appraised, Jan. 14, 1644-5, had thirty bushels of Indian corn, valued at four pounds, and also, oats, white peas, beans, hemp and flax. Widow Margaret Pease of Salem, who died in 1644, had wheat, Indian corn and rye. John Pride of Salem, whose estate was appraised in February, 1647-8, then had on hand wheat, barley, pease and Indian corn, together valued at three pounds. Edmund Ingalls of Lynn, at the time that he was drowned in March, 1648, had hemp and flax in his barn valued at one pound. When the estate of Hugh Burt, jr., was appraised Oct. 8, 1650, he had wheat and other English grain, valued at one pound and one shilling, and thirty bushels of Indian corn, valued at four pounds and ten shillings. Edmund Lewis of Lynn, at the time his estate was appraised, Feb. 12, 1650-1, had ten bushels of wheat, valued at two pounds and ten shillings, ten bushels of oats, valued at five pounds and seven shillings, and sixty bushels of Indian corn, valued at ninety pounds. The inventory of the estate of John Osgood, sr., of Andover, taken Nov. 25, 1651, shows that he had sixty bushels of barley, valued at thirteen pounds, fifty bushels of pease, valued at eight pounds and fifteen shillings, and rye sowed twelve pounds. When the estate of William Stevens of Newbury was appraised, June 13, 1653, he had four acres of rye, wheat and barley growing, valued at eight pounds, and three acres of Indian corn, valued at four pounds. In the inventory of the estate of Thomas Trusler of Salem, taken March 5, 1653-4, is mentioned four bushels of Indian meal, valued at twelve shillings, twenty pounds of hemp, valued at ten shillings, two bushels of seed barley, valued at ten shillings, and two bushels of seed pease, valued at eight shillings. In the inventory of the estate of John Balch of Salem, taken in 1648, is mentioned nine acres of wheat, valued at nine pounds six shillings of Indian corn, valued at six pounds, one acre of oats, valued at one pound, and twelve bushels of Indian corn, valued at one pound and sixteen shillings. Thomas Mighill of Rowley, who died early in the summer of 1654, had a large farm, and in the inventory of his estate is mentioned corn meal and malt, corn measures, one breaking-up plow with "her" irons, valued at one pound and two shillings, three other plows, valued at one pound and one shilling, seven and one-half acres of wheat and barley, valued at eight pounds and five shillings, four and one-half acres of corn, valued at five pounds and eight shillings, three acres of Indian corn, valued at three pounds and twelve shillings, four acres of wheat and Indian corn, valued at four pounds, and corn at the pen, valued at three pounds. John Porter, sr., of Salem, who died Sept. 6, 1676, was a more extensive farmer than Mr. Mighill. In the inventory of his estate is mentioned forty-six sheep, fourteen lambs, eight oxen, fifteen cows, eleven calves, nine two-year olds, eight yearlings, two steers, one bull, fourteen swine, eleven shoats, six mares, five horses, two colts, twelve acres of barley, valued at twenty-seven pounds, two acres of pease, valued at three pounds, one acre of wheat, valued at thirty-two shillings, and twelve acres of Indian corn, valued at twenty-four pounds.

In the earlier inventories of estates of deceased persons is no mention of roots, turnips, parsnips, carrots, onions, squashes melons, etc. Probably these were produced in small quantities, as they were more perishable than the hard grains.

The flail and the floor were the means of threshing out the grain by the early settlers; and in the inventory of the estate of Edmund Lewis of Lynn, Feb. 12, 1650-1, is mentioned a "fan", which was probably an instrument to separate the grain from the chaff.

SALEM IN 1700. NO. 28.

BY SIDNEY PERLEY.

The map on page 111 represents that part of Salem which is bounded by Essex, Washington, Front and Central streets. It is based on actual surveys and title deeds, and is drawn on a scale of two hundred feet to an inch. It shows the location of all houses that were standing there in 1700.

Essex street was one of the original streets of the settlement. It was called a street in 1660; street passing to the meeting house, 1664; the main street whereon the meeting house standeth, 1664; the main street, 1689; Main street, 1690; Street from ye meeting house to ye East end of ye town, 1694; street or highway, 1698-9; and Essex street as early as 1796.

Central street was an original way to the water front. It was called the lane or way that goes to the water side and wharf whereon the warehouse of William Browne standeth in 1664; Lane or way that goeth down along by the warehouse of Benjamin Browne to the South river, 1690; highway to river, 1693; street or highway that leads down to Major Browne's wharf, 1714; the highway, 1733; the lane leading to the water, 1782; lane or street leading from Main street to South river, 1785; Hanover street leading from the main street to the South river, 1790; Market street 1809; and Central street, 1821.

Front street was one of the ancient ways along the water front. It was called the water side in 1662; highway, 1682; highway leading by the sea, 1746; Water street, 1784; the street leading by South river, 1787; Water street, 1800; and Front street, as early as 1853.

Washington street was originally about four rods wide, but the space actually reserved on this side of Essex street was about seven rods wide. For a year or after Endecott came this space remained unoccupied. The first part that bore private land was that part designated on the map as the lot of Elizur Key, which evidence indicates was the site of the house of Rev. Francis Higginson. A jail was erected here, and grants were made to John Horne, Mary Chichester, Henry West and Thomas Tuck. The second meeting house was located in this space also. That part westerly of the Elizur Keysor house was called the town land or street in 1698; street leading from the Court house to the wharf, 1760; highway leading from the Court house in Salem to Marblehead, 1770; "road leading to Marblehead or elsewhere", 1785; road leading from Marblehead to Capt. William Orne's store, 1794; and the new court house, 1794; and Washington street in 1810. East of the Elizur Keysor house the way was called the highway in 1665; town land or street in 1693; lane or way leading from ye town house down to the sea, 1746; lane leading from the great meeting house to the dock house wharf, 1762; lane between the lot of Edmund Hensfield and land of Abraham Cabot and Hannah Smith, 1770; and a lane in 1810. On the south side of the Elizur Keysor lot, it was called the town land or street in 1693; highway in 1760; and common land in 1770 and 1810. On the north side of the Elizur Keysor house the land was called the town land or street in 1693; and highway in 1770. One of these lanes was popularly called "Shirk alley" nearly a century ago.

The lane on the east side of the John Orne lot was called a highway in 1665; street or highway, 1703; way from the main street, 1726; lane, 1747; highway, 1762; and lane or way, 1791. This was abolished on the widening of Washington street in 1839.

The short way, of about five rods in length, at the corner of what was originally the broad street and the street to the south of the premises was called a highway in 1695; highway or common land, 1747; town land, 1786; way leading to Cabot's wharf and to wharves to the eastward of it, 1792; a road, 1794; and Short street, 1827.

The way on the south side of the meeting house was called a highway in 1665; a street or highway, 1693; and highway by the south side of the great meeting house, 1762.

The way on the east side of the meeting house was called a street, in 1674; street or highway, 1693; a lane between ye meeting house and shop of William Driver, 1702; and ye highway as late as 1734.

The cove which came up into the street was called a creek in 1736. This was filled about a hundred years ago.

The South river was called the river in 1660; South river, 1664; and the sea in 1746. It was filled along the street about a century ago.

The meeting house lot was taken from the lot of William Lord before August, 1635. The first meeting house, built prior to that date, stood on the vacant lot east of the meeting house shown on the map. For the history of the first meeting house, see Essex Institute Historical Collections, volume XXXIX, page 209. The meeting house was taken down in August, 1672; and its timbers were used in the construction of a town, school and watch house a few yards west of the meeting house shown on the map, two years later. It was not finished in 1677, when it was removed to the middle of Washington street opposite to what is now known as the Brookhouse estate. The meeting house shown on the map was built in 1671, sixty feet long, fifty feet wide and twenty feet posts. This edifice stood until 1718. After the first meeting house was removed its site was known and used as a market place. When the second meeting house was erected in 1671, the prison, which then stood upon that site, was removed to the west, into what was then the garden of Benjamin Felton; and there the prison remained until the new jail on St. Peter street was built in 1684.

In the sketches that follow, after 1700, titles and deeds referred to pertain to the houses and land adjoining and not always to the whole lot, the design being after that date, to give the history of the houses then standing principally.

David Phippen House. This lot was early owned by William Browne of Salem, merchant. For thirty-two pounds, he conveyed the northern part of it and the dwelling house thereon to Thomas Cromwell of Salem, tailor, 20: 2: 1664.* Mr. Cromwell died March 17, 1686-7; and his widow, Ann Cromwell, and son-in-law Jonathan Pickering and wife Jane, and son-in-law David Phippen and wife Ann, all of Salem, for sixty-five pounds and seventeen shillings, conveyed the house and northern part of the lot to Benjamin Browne of Salem, merchant, Oct. 21, 1690.† Benjamin Browne's stable stood upon the southern part of the lot, and he probably received his title from William Browne who owned the stable and land in 1664, but no conveyance has been found. Benjamin Browne apparently conveyed the entire lot with the house and stable to David Phippen of Salem, shipwright, before 1693. The latter died in 1703, intestate. The house and lot were then valued at ninety-five pounds. Mr. Phippen's widow, Anne Phippen, and the surviving children of Mr. Phippen, viz.: Thomas Phippen, mariner, William Furneux, rope maker, and wife Abigail, Benjamin Ropes, cordwainer, and wife Anne, and John Webb, seaman, and wife Elizabeth, all of Salem, for eighty pounds, conveyed the house and lot to Capt. John Brown of Salem, merchant, May 27, 1714.* The house was gone apparently before Captain Brown's death, which occurred in the spring of 1719.

George Felt House. Elias Stileman owned this lot very early: and July 4, 1693, when he was of Portsmouth, N. H., for fourteen pounds and ten shillings, conveyed it to George Felt of Salem, blockmaker.† Mr. Felt built a house upon the lot, in which he lived until his death, which occurred Feb. 24, 1729. The house, shop, barn and land were then appraised at three hundred and twenty pounds. Four children survived Mr. Felt, Mary, wife of William Bartoll of Falmouth, Me., shipwright, Jemima Ashby, widow of Jonathan Ashby of Salem, shipwright, Bonfield Felt of Salem, blockmaker, and Benjamin Felt of Salem, coaster. Bonfield Felt conveyed his interest to his brother Benjamin Felt Feb. 18, 1733:‡ and Mrs. Ashby conveyed her interest to her brother Bonfield Felt May 1, 1734.§ Mr. and Mrs. Bartoll conveyed the latter's interest to her brother Bonfield Felt in June, 1736.¶ Feb. 2, 1749, a partition of the estate (the mother having died) took place between Bonfield and Benjamin, and Bonfield received the northern half of the lot and western half of the house,¶ and Benjamin the southern half of the lot and eastern half of the house. May 12, 1760, when Bonfield Felt was living in his end of the house, he conveyed that part of the house and the land to his brother Benjamin;†† and April 15, 1763, he released his interest in the entire estate to his brother Benjamin.‡‡ Benjamin Felt lived in the house, and died March 1, 1769, having devised the house and land under and adjoining to his son Benjamin. Benjamin Felt, jr., was a coaster, and lived in the house. For three hundred and forty pounds, he conveyed the western half of the house and land under and to the westward of it to wife Bethiah Trask of Salem Dec. 19, 1761. She lived in the house, and, for one hundred and twenty pounds, conveyed the same estate to Edward Augustus Holyoke, esq., of Salem July 25, 1793.† Mr. Holyoke, for four hundred and fifty Spanish milled dollars, conveyed the same property to Edward Russell of Salem, coaster May 3, 1798.§ Benjamin Felt had conveyed the eastern end of the house and land under and next easterly of it to Mr. Russell March 11, 1790.§ Mr. Russell moved the house to the rear part of the lot; and died Jan. 14, 1815, having devised the estate to his wife Sarah. The house was then valued at one hundred dollars. She died Oct. 12, 1843, having devised it to Sarah Baxter Safford and Edward Barker Russell. The latter lived in Brunswick, Me., and was a mariner. He conveyed his half of the estate to Sarah Baxter Safford, who lived in Salem being the wife of Joshua Safford, Aug. 3, 1845.¶ Mrs. Safford took the house down. It was a small one-storied gambrel-roofed house, standing end to the street, and having the front door in the middle of one side. There was one window on either side of the front door, and dormer windows in the roof.

Benjamin Browne Lot. This lot belonged to William Browne quite early, and he died possessed of it Jan. 20, 1687. This also included an interest in the wharf at the southeast corner which was granted to him by the town of Salem Aug. 29, 1681. It descended to his son Benjamin Browne of Salem, a merchant, who owned it until his death in 1708.

John Cromwell Houses. This lot of land originally belonged to Rev. Samuel Skelton, and to Mr. Philip Cromwell

PART OF SALEM IN 1700. NO. 28.

1647. In 1660, there was only one house upon it. Mr. Cromwell apparently erected another house upon the lot some years later. He laid out a passage to it twelve feet wide and seventy feet long, and died possessed of the estate March 30, 1693. It descended to his son, John Cromwell, who died possessed of the lot and both houses Sept. 30, 1700. The house nearest the street had been occupied by Edward Cox, and the other by a Mrs. Bartholomew. Under the will of Mr. Cromwell, his widow, Hannah Cromwell of Salem conveyed the estate to Florence Maccarty of Boston, slaughterer, Nov. 28, 1701.* Mr. Maccarty evidently took down the old house immediately, and died in 1712. His estate was divided Jan. 18, 1723, when the houses were both gone.

Florence Maccarty House. This lot originally belonged to Rev. Samuel Skelton, and to Mr. Philip Cromwell as early as 1647. There was then a house upon the lot, and the latter died possessed of the estate March 30, 1693. The estate descended to his son John Cromwell of Salem, slaughterer, who built a shop and slaughter-house. For one hundred and twenty pounds, he conveyed the house, shop, slaughter-house and land to Florence Maccarty of Boston March 17, 1698-9.† Mr. Maccarty died in 1712, possessed of the estate, and the house was gone before 1723.

William Browne House. That part of this lot lying easterly of the dashes originally belonged to Rev. Samuel Skelton, whose house stood at the southern end of the lot. Mr. Skelton came to Salem in 1629, and was the first pastor of the church in Salem. He died Aug. 2, 1634; and the estate came into the hands of his son-in-law Nathaniel Felton of Salem. Mr. Felton sold the "old" house and land to Mr. William Browne, sr., of Salem in 1643, though no deed was passed in confirmation of the sale until Nov. 26, 1668.‡ "The ould house In Salem which once was m^r Skeltons being in Eminent Danger of present falling to the endangering of the lives of Children & Cattell and others" the county court ordered that it be taken down within ten days 27: 6: 1644, and it was so removed probably.*

The remainder of the lot belonged to Hugh Laskin very early, and he lived in the house at the southern end of the lot, which was called "an old house" in 1647. The two houses and the land were owned by Richard Stilman of Salem, when he conveyed the estate to Samuel Sharp, elder of ye church of Salem, and Elias Stilman, sr., feofees in trust, for the use of his son Samuel Stilman and his heirs forever; reserving his dwelling house thereon for eighteen years at the rent of five pounds a year, "Provided if by Casualtie of fire the houses be destroyed the Rent to be abated accordinglie, and in case the s^d Samuell dyeth before he be at adg of 21 years then the whole Estat to Returne to ye said Richard & his heires." This instrument is dated Aug. 9, 1647.† Samuel Stilman probably died a minor, as his father, who had removed to Portsmouth, N. H., conveyed the houses and land to his cousin Elias Stileman, esq., of Portsmouth, April 12, 1660.‡ The old house was gone before July 23, 1694, when Elias Stileman, for one hundred and twenty pounds, conveyed one house and the lot to Maj. William Browne, esq., of Salem, merchant.§ Mr. Browne lived here, and died in February, 1715-6, possessed of the entire estate. In his will he devised this his homestead, with the house, land, etc., to his son Samuel Browne. Col. Samuel Browne was a judge, representative and one of the largest merchants of the town in his time. He removed the house before 1731.

Estate of William Driver House. This little lot of fifteen feet square was a part of the homestead of William Lord as early as 1635. The town voted, 22: 6:

1635, that a committee "should consider of some convenient place for shops yt may be wth the owners consent;" and suggestions for shops at this corner were made. Benjamin Felton had a shop on the lot in 1647; and at a meeting of the selectmen, 3: 6: 1659, "Leave was given to Richard Horne Taylour to mend vp the little house Joyning to the meeting house & make vse of it for a shopp at the Townes pleasure."* The town gave liberty to Thomas Hale "to build a shopp adoyning to the meetinge houe were the select men shall apoynt it: & to enioy it at the Towns pleasure."† Edward Wharton owned the lot, with the house thereon, in 1660. Capt. George Corwin, the merchant, subsequently owned it; and with the two-story shops and cellar thereon conveyed the estate to Joseph Stacey. Mr. Stacey owned "the house of shops" in 1689. He died Oct. 15, 1690, and the house and lot were then appraised at forty-five pounds. Orally, in the presence of John Marston and Hannah Harby, he gave everything he had to his mother the night he died. His mother, Susannah Stacey of Salem, with the consent of her sons William Stacey and John Stacey, who join in the deed, conveyed the estate to William Driver of Salem, Chandler, Jan. 3, 1690-1.‡ Mr. Driver died the same year; and his son William Driver of Salem, cordwainer, for ten pounds, released the shop and lot to his step-father, Daniel Grant of Salem, Chandler, April 30, 1702.§ Daniel Grant had married Mr. Driver's widow and also continued the Chandler business at the old stand. Mr. Grant, as administrator of Mr. Driver's estate, for forty-seven pounds and ten shillings, conveyed the house and land to Daniel Caton of Salem, tailor, March 3, 1709-10.|| For seventy-five pounds, Mr. Caton conveyed the house and land to Samuel Browne of Salem, merchant, Oct. 21, 1734.¶ Mr.

Browne died possessed of it in 173-, and the house stood some years after 1742, but was gone before 1784.

Samuel Phillips Houses. That part of this lot lying north of the dashes was originally a part of the homestead of Hugh Laskin, and early came into the hands of Richard Stilman, who owned it in 1647. He removed to Portsmouth, N. H., after that date, and he conveyed it to his cousin Elias Stileman of Portsmouth April 12, 1660.* The latter, for ten pounds, conveyed it to Samuel Phillips of Salem, goldsmith, May 25, 1689.† Mr. Phillips built a house upon this lot; and conveyed the house and land, "where I now dwell," one-fourth to his wife Sarah, one-fourth to his daughter Patience, and one-half to his son John Phillips, stationer, May 3, 1722.‡ Mr. Phillips was then sick probably and died before Nov. 14, 1722, when a division of his estate was made, and this house and lot were assigned to the widow and Patience as their half of the estate.§ For ninety-five pounds, they conveyed the house and lot to Richard Bethel of Salem, tailor, Nov. 17, 1722;|| and, for sixty pounds, Mr. Bethel conveyed the estate (in mortgage) to Col. Samuel Browne of Salem, esquire, July 12, 1731.¶ Colonel Browne died possessed of it in 173-. The house was standing in 1742, but was probably gone some years later.

That part of the lot lying westerly of the dashes was also a part of the William Lord lot, and was owned, with the house thereon, by Edward Wharton as early as 1660 and in 1671. It belonged to Lt. Thomas Gardner of Salem subsequently, and he died possessed of it in 1682. A suit at law was brought against his estate, and judgment therein was obtained July 31, 1683. In satisfaction of the execution, which was issued upon the judgment, this part of the lot was set off to the judgment creditor, the executor of the will of Hezekiah Usher of Boston, merchant, deceased, by the sheriff, Nov. 18, 1684.* The said executor conveyed the house and this part of the lot to Samuel Phillips of Salem, goldsmith, Oct. 26, 1698.† The house was then occupied by Stephen Ingalls, the widow of Lt. Thomas Gardner having lived there until her decease in or before 1695. Mr. Phillips conveyed the house and land to his wife Sarah, his daughter Patience and his son John Phillips of Boston, stationer, May 3, 1722.‡ Upon the division of the estate, Nov. 14, 1722, this house and lot were assigned to his son John Phillips.§ It was then called "an old house." Two days later, for ninety-five pounds, John Phillips conveyed the land and "old house or end of a house" to Richard Bethel of Salem, tailor;|| and Mr. Bethel conveyed the house and lot to Col. Samuel Browne of Salem, esquire, July 12, 1731.¶ Colonel Browne probably took the house down.

That part of the lot lying within the dashes at the southeast corner of the lot was a part of the lot originally owned by Hugh Laskin, and later by Richard Stileman. Mr. Stileman removed to Portsmouth, N. H., before April 12, 1660, when he conveyed it to his cousin Elias Stileman, esq., also of Portsmouth. For a parcel of glass, Mr. Stileman conveyed this small lot to Edward Wharton of Salem, glazier, Aug. 31, 1668.†† It came into the ownership of Lt. Thomas Gardner of Salem, and it belonged to him at the time of his death, in 1682. Upon the execution already mentioned this lot was assigned to the executor of the will of Hezekiah Usher of Boston, merchant, deceased, Nov. 18, 1684.* The executor conveyed it to Samuel Phillips of Salem, goldsmith, Oct. 26, 1698;† and Mr. Phillips owned it until 1722.

Susanna Lyde Lot. This lot was owned by Capt. George Corwin as early as 1660; and his "upper" warehouse, measuring 18½ x 44½ feet, stood upon it. He died Jan. 3, 1684-5, and by agreement of the heirs, July 4, 1684, it was assigned to his daughter Susanna, wife of Edward Lyde of Boston, merchant, but the agreement was not put into writing until Dec. 1, 1701.* She owned it after that date. It is stated that Captain Corwin bought the lot of Edward Beacham and Edward Norrice.

Walter Price Lot. This lot was a part of the homestead of William Lord as early as 1635. He died about 165-, and his widow and executrix, Abigail Lord, for forty pounds, conveyed this lot and part of the dwelling house, "adjoining to the row of houses I now live in to that part," to Edmund Berry of Salem, weaver, Oct. 1, 1674.† Mr. Berry lived in this house, and, for his life support conveyed the lot and house to his son-in-law Mark Haskell of Beverly, carpenter, Sept. 13, 1684.‡ The house was gone April 5, 1693, when Mr. Haskell conveyed the lot to Sarah Price of Salem, "gentlewoman."§ She died in 1698, and the lot descended to her only child, Walter Price of Salem, merchant, who owned it in 1701.

Josiah Wolcott Lot. This was a portion of the homestead of William Lord as early as 1635; and he died possessed of it in 165-. His widow and executrix, Abigail Lord of Salem, for love, conveyed it, with the eastern half of the dwelling house thereon, containing the "upper and lower room," to Samuel Gray and his wife Abigail, her daughter and son-in-law, Oct. 1, 1674.|| Mrs. Lord then occupied part of the house. This part of the estate belonged to Mrs. Gray's nephew, Joseph Lord who conveyed it to his father, William Lord. The latter gave it to his son Jeremiah Lord of Ipswich, weaver, who, for five pounds, released it to Josiah Wolcott of Salem, merchant (the house being gone), July 13, 1693.* Mr. Wolcott owned it in 1700.

Samuel and Abigail Gray Lot. This was a part of the homestead of William Lord as early as 1635. He died possessed of it in 16—; and his widow and executrix, Abigail Lord, for love, conveyed the land and house, except the eastern end of the house, comprising the upper and lower rooms, in which she then lived, and the use of the old barn, well, etc., which she reserved for her life, to her daughter Abigail and the latter's husband Samuel Gray Oct. 1, 1674.† The house was gone before 1700, when the lot still belonged to them.

Deliverance Parkman House. That part of this lot lying northwesterly of the dashes was owned by William Lord as early as 1635; and, for ten pounds, he conveyed it to Stephen Haskett of Salem, soapboiler, April 6, 1664.‡ For a similar consideration, Mr. Haskett conveyed it to Edward Wharton of Salem, glazier, Oct. 3, 1671.§ Mr. Wharton died before Nov. 26, 1678; and, for twelve pounds, the administrator of his estate conveyed it to Hilliard Veren of Salem, scrivener, April 8, 1682.|| Mr. Veren, for thirteen pounds, conveyed the lot to Deliverance Parkman of Salem, mariner, March 25, 1683.¶

The remainder of the lot was owned by William Lord as early as 1635. For six pounds, he conveyed it to John Cole of Salem, cooper, "for a house plot," March 19, 1662. Mr. Cole built a house thereon, and, for twenty-eight pounds, conveyed the house, shop, wharf and lot to Robert Wilkes of Salem, shipwright, Feb. 22, 1675-6.†† He was taken sick while on a voyage from Bristol to New England in the autumn of 1677, and died on the voyage, having devised this house, out-houses and land to his wife Mary for her life, and then to his niece Mary Woodbury. The estate was then appraised at fifty pounds. Mrs. Woodbury and her husband, Isaac Woodbury, sr., and their daughter Mary Woodbury, all of Beverly, for thirty pounds, conveyed the house, shop and land to Mr. Parkman (who owned the remainder of the lot) Feb. 19, 1693-4.* Mr. Parkman thus became the owner of the entire lot, and died in 1715, possessed of it, with the warehouse, "small old dwelling or work house" and wharf thereon. The estate was then valued at sixteen pounds. The house was probably gone soon after.

Edmond Batter Lot. That part of this lot lying easterly of the dashes was a part of the homestead of William Lord as early as 1635. He died possessed of it in 165—; and by his request his executrix conveyed it to his daughter Margaret Lord. Her brother-in-law William Godsoe of Salem, mariner, had built a dwelling house partly on this part of the lot and partly on the other part which he bought of Reuben Guppy; and Obadiah Rich lived in it in the winter of 1673-4, and Edward Winter in 1674. Miss Lord conveyed her part of the land to Mr. Godsoe July 1, 1682.†

That part of the lot lying westerly of the dashes was granted by the town to Mr. Godsoe by order of Reuben Guppy of Salem March 6, 1678-9.‡ The grant was of "a house lot to the southward off will Lords present dwelling house, bounded, with the land of mr Resolved white on the East & the house and land of Wm Lord on the north & wth the townes land on the West & South to Lay forty two fott longe from within Six foott from william Lords house Southerly & twenty two fott & halfe in Breadth East & West." Mr. Guppy conveyed it to Mr. Godsoe Dec. 14, 1678.§

Mr. Godsoe lived in the house. It was gone before Oct. 20, 1694, when it had passed to Madam Elizabeth Corwin, widow of Capt. George Corwin, who on that date, for eighteen pounds, conveyed the land to James Gillingham of Salem, sawyer.* Mr. Gillingham conveyed it to Edmon Batter of Salem, tanner, Oct. 18, 1695,† and Mr. Batter owned the lot in 1700.

Joseph Lord House. The selectmen of Salem granted to Mary, wife of William Chichester, 24 : 1 : 1662-3, "a small plott of grounde belowe Rich : Harveys houle to fet a dwellinge houle : 25 foote in leight and 18 foote in breadth provided thee build on it within two yeares elce to retorne to the towne."* A house was built upon the lot immediately. John Mastone, jr., of Salem, carpenter, conveyed the house and land to Ankias Horsman of Salem, seaman, Dec. 26, 1667;§ and, for fifty pounds, Mr. Horsman conveyed the estate to William Lord, sr., and his wife, Abigail Lord, Feb. 3, 1667-8.¶ The house was then unfinished, and in the last-mentioned deed was agreed to be finished according to a covenant between Mr. Henry Bartholomew and John Norton, sr., dated 12 : 11 mo : 1663. John Norton was probably the contractor. John Guppy lived in this house in 1674. Isaac Stearns of Salem conveyed the estate to Joseph Lord of Salem, mariner, before 1692; and Mr. Lord removed to Boston, where he was living in 1700. The house was probably gone soon after that date.

John Orne House. This lot was granted by the town of Salem to John Horne (Orne) 18 : 9 : 1661, and described as "in the gutt between W^m Lord fen & Helyard veren houle : 18 foote broad & 40 foot in length."§ He evidently conveyed it to Richard Harvey of Salem, tailor, who immediately built a house upon it; and, for thirty pounds, Mr. Harvey conveyed the house and lot to Mr. Horne June 17, 1665.* Deacon Horne conveyed the estate to his son John Orne of Salem, cordwinder, as a gift, Nov. 4, 1684.† The grantee was then living in the house, and he continued to occupy it. He removed to Boston, and died there possessed of the estate. The executor of his will, for ninety pounds, conveyed the land and house "with an old end of a dwelling house adjoining to it" to Zechariah Burchmore of Salem, mariner, April 24, 1724.‡ Mr. Burchmore, for seventy-five pounds, conveyed the house and land to Abraham Cabot of Salem, fisherman, Oct. 14, 1732.§ For forty pounds, Mr. Cabot conveyed the house, well and land to George Smith of Salem, mariner, Jan. 18, 1762.¶ Mr. Smith apparently removed the house soon afterward.

Elizur Keysor House. By an agreement made in London April 8, 1629, with the governor and company of the Massachusetts Bay, Rev. Francis Higginson, the first teacher of the church in Salem, was to have a house built for him. Mr. Higginson arrived here June 29, 1629; and in just a year thereafter he died, leaving a widow and eight children. The house and land was apparently given to his widow. In this house lived Roger Williams; and at the time of his banishment, at the request of Mrs. Higginson (who had removed to Charlestown), he conveyed the estate to John Woolcott of Salem. Mr. Woolcott conveyed it, with two bedsteads, table, forms and shelves in the house, and all the fences about it, to William Lord of Salem Nov. 9, 1635. The following is an exact copy of the deed, which is unrecorded and is found in the files of the county court at Salem for March 30, 1669 :—¶

This deed is on file among the papers in the case of William Lord against John Horne, which relates to the title of the land to the westward of William Lord's land as shown on the map. This deed could not have referred to William Lord's homestead as he owned it some time before the date of this deed of the Higginson house. As the deed conveyed "all the fences about it," the conclusion is that no part of the fences belonged to any other person, that is, that there were no adjoining owners, Mr. Hilliard Veren, who appears as its owner in 1659, was a public man, and a man worthy to succeed to such a prominent and historic residence. Mr. Lord and the Veren family had many real estate transactions together.

Hillard Veren owned the estate May 2, 1659, when the town granted to him
"Roome before his now dwellinge house to make a Porch."* He died Dec. 20, 1683, at the age of sixty-three; and the estate, which was then valued, with the house and barn thereon, at one hundred pounds, descended to his two daughters, Mary, wife of Samuel Williams of Salem, and Abigail, wife of Benjamin Marston of Salem. They divided the house and lot, Mary taking the western, and Abigail, the easterly part. Mr. Williams died, and his widow, Mary Williams, with the consent of her son Samuel Williams, for forty-three pounds, conveyed her half of the house and lot to John Woodwell of Salem, glover, April 6, 1693.* Mr. Marston, for forty pounds, conveyed his wife's half of the lot and house, with the leanto, to Mr. Woodwell Nov. 14, 1693.† For forty-five pounds, sixteen shillings and eight pence, Mr. Woodwell conveyed the house, barn and land to Elizur Keysor of Salem, tanner, May 11, 1698.‡ Mr. Keysor conveyed the same estate to Florence Maccarty of Boston April 7, 1707.§ Mr.

Maccarty, for twenty-eight pounds, conveyed it to Peter Windet of Salem, currier, May 8, 1707.|| Mr. Windet evidently removed the old house soon afterward.

NOTES.

John Brobrooke lived in Newbury at the time of his death, June 28, 1662.
He had a mother and an uncle Short.
He had an estate in England, and interest in a house and lot in Watertown, evidently his father's as his mother had an interest in it also. His estate here was appraised at £117, 3s., 3d. He had brothers and sisters Samuel, Joseph, Elizabeth, Sarah, Rebecca, Rachel and Thom-

William Thomas v. Thomas Scers. Concerning an acre of land bought of said Scers, who refuses to deliver it.

Town of Ipswich v. Issaack Consens, For bringing an old woman and leaving her in the town without providing for her. Continued for advice of the general court.

Thomas Davis v. Benjamin Swett. For taking away plaintiff's servant, Stephen Dow. The boy to be returned; and plaintiff confessed that he was to teach Stephen to read and write and the trade of a stone mason according to the capacity of the boy and the employment of the place where he lives.

[Bill of charges of Thomas Davis.

Bartholmew Heth, aged forty-one year, deposed that Steven Dow was a very poor and weak creature to look upon and of a very low stature according to ye age that he was said to be when he came to live with Thomas Davis; that said Davis never corrected him; that the provision in his house was as good as that of men of his estate; that the boy ate the same kind of food as his master; heard some discourse between said Davis and the defendant concerning the boy, and Davis asked Swett to prove his title to the boy before indifferent judges. Swett refused to arbitrate. This was at Newbury. On coming home from Newbury later we saw said Swett coming home from Haverhill with the boy riding. Sworn to before Robert Clement.

John Williams, sr., deposed that he heard the boy speak well of his master and dame, viz.: Thomas Davis and his wife, that they used him well, and that he fared as well as most in ye town. She taught him his book, he was well dressed, and was not abused. Sometimes he ran away without cause.

John Bartlett testified that Thomas Dowe, father of Steven Dow, at his return from Haverhill, said that he had left the boy with the plaintiff until he was eighteen years old, to teach him to read and write and the trade of a stone mason, etc.

Richard Littlehale and wife Mary deposed that they saw at Thomas Davis' the kind and tender usage of the boy,—like parents. When the boy first went there about eight and a half years ago, he was a poor helpless child, of small stature. Sworn before Robert Clement.

Robert Clement, jr., deposed that he remembered an agreement by Benjamin Swett of Newbury and Thomas Davis of Haverhill, about evidence of their title to the boy. Sworn to before Robert Clement.

Thomas Eyer deposed that a little before Thomas Dow died he was at work with me, and we had some conversation about his son dwelling at Thomas Davis'. He said he had not bound him to him. Sworn to before Robert Clements.

Robert Hazeldine deposed: I saw Benjamin Swett with Steven Dow in my canoe over ye river at Haverhill when I asked said Swett where they were. He answered, "I am going to carry him to his right owner." Swett helped the boy up his horse and went away. Sworn to before Robert Clements.

Judith, wife of Samuell Gild, deposed that when the boy came to live with said Davis he was a very weakly child and meanly clothed; and Davis was to have him twelve and a half or thirteen years. Sworn to as above.

Samuel Gild deposed that he first had Steven Dow for a week, but the boy's father wanted Thomas Davis to have the boy, and so took him there. He was a poor helpless child, likely to be a burthen and no benefit, very hard to learn his book, very meanly appparelled, and not able to put on and off his own clothes. Sworn to as above.

Joanna, wife of George Corlis, deposed that it was a good while before the boy could eat his master's food, this is, meat and milk, or drink beer, saying he did not know it was good because he was not used to eat such victuals, but to eat bread and water porridge and drink victuals. Sworn to as above.

Steven Swett deposed that at ye ordinary in Newbury he heard Benjamin Swett demand of Thomas Davis of Haverhill whether he would deliver the boy to his mother. Davis replied that he would not, etc. Sworn to March 31, 1657, before John Pike, commissioner for Newbury.

Phebe Dow, mother of the boy, testified that Thomas Davis was to teach him the trade of a stone mason. Stephen came to my house, and there was willing to abide, but said Davis pulled him away with violence, to our great grief. Signed by her p mark.

Christopher Bartlet, aged thirty-three years, deposed that Thomas Dow told him that he had placed his son with Thomas

Davis till he was eighteen years of age, etc.

James Davis, sr., and wife deposed that they were very much troubled when their son-in-law Samuel Gild was about taking of Steven Dow to be his servant as he was such a poor helpless child and likely to be a burthen to him and little benefit. Sworn to before Robert Clement.

Ephraim Davis deposed that Thomas Dow said it was much to his joy and comfort that Thomas Davis had taken his son. Sworn as above.

George Corlis deposed that Steven Dow was a very weakly child, and of a low stature, when he came to live with Thomas Davis. Sworn as above.

Tristram Coffin, jr., deposed about the same as Steven Swett did, as above. Sworn in court.

William Howard deposed that he was one of four arbitrators in the case between these parties, etc.

John Chater and Rich: Doole were assessed to the same. All sworn in court March 31, 1657.

James Brading testified that, Dec. 10, 1656, Richard Kent and his servants went over to his farm and cleaned his cowhouse and at night he spoke to one to despatch Lancelot Granger to show him how to put up the cattle. He answered, I am going to my brother, and will come back presently and tie them up for you. Richard Kent carried out muck with the cattle for nine days; and Dec. 20, 1656, Richard Kent sent over his servants to fetch hay for the cattle. Mr. Granger refused to let them take away hay, saying that he would not abide by the award of the arbitrators. He bade me speak to my uncle, to fetch away the cattle he had bought of his brother, etc. Sworn in Ipswich court 31: 1: 1657.

Daniel Thurston deposed that Mr. Granger told, the next day after the award was made, that he had delivered the farm, etc., to Mr. Kent and he was to remain at the farm house a short time to thresh out some corn he had in the barn; etc.; that Goodman Gould was engaged for it in part and his father Addoms or Goodmans Chater for the rest; and he had some thought of going to England, etc. Sworn to in Ipswich court 31: 1: 1657.

CAPT. EDMUND BRAY.

Capt. Edmund Bray married Sarah Pedrick Jan. 4, 1795; and lived in Marblehead, in the house now belonging to Francis Goodwin, on State street. His wife died, of consumption, April 10, 1814, at the age of forty. His mother, Mrs. Bray, died, of dysentery, Sept. —, 1822, at the age of seventy-four. Captain Bray's children were born in Marblehead, and were as follows: Mary, baptized May 9, 1796; Isabella, baptized June 11, 1797; Edmund, baptized, Nov. 6, 1798; buried at the Island of Java Aug. 20, 1835, aged thirty-six; John baptized May 13, 1804; died, of consumption, March 30, 1826; Knott Pedrick, baptized May 13, 1804; lived in Marblehead; master-mariner; married Mary E. Andrews Oct. 22, 1846; Sally, baptized Oct. 28, 1804, died, of consumption, July 28, 1826; Thomas Pedrick, baptized Dec. 14, 1806; Evelina, baptized March 24, 1814.

Evelina, the youngest child, is said to have been three or four years old at the time of her baptism. At the age of seventeen she attended Haverhill Academy, being a classmate of John Greenleaf Whittier, who was at that time two years older than she. They became deeply interested in each other; and Whittier visited her at her home in Marblehead. The following verses of his poem, entitled

"A Sea Dream," she acknowledged relate to them:—

The waves are glad in breeze and sun;
The rocks are fringed with foam;
I walk once more a haunted shore,
A stranger, yet at home,—
A land of dreams I roam.

Is this the wind, the soft sea-wind
That stirred thy locks of brown?
Are these the rocks whose mosses knew
The trail of thy light gown,
Where boy and girl sat down?

I see the gray forts broken wall,
The boats that rock below,
And, out at sea, the passing sails
We saw so long ago
Rose-red in morning's glow.

Adverse circumstances forbade marriage. Both families opposed the match, his family because they were Quakers and could not permit a marriage "out of society," and her family because Whittier was poor. She rarely referred to her early acquaintance with the poet, though at the latter part of her life she remarked that during that youthful acquaintance with Whittier it seemed as if the dew kept whispering to her, "He is only a shoemaker!"

She was engaged with Catherine Beecher in educational work, and finally married an Englishman, Rev. William S. Downey, who was an evangelist. Mr. Downey made a crusade against Romanism, and his death was caused by wounds received from facing a New York mob. She had no children. As is well known, Mr. Whittier never married. In her widowhood she corresponded with the poet, and attended the reunion of the scholars of the old academy in 1885. At the reunion, as Rev. S. F. Smith said in her more than seventy years, and black silk and white muslin veil, reaching over her silvered head and down below her shoulders, she looked just as if she were a Romish Madonna, who had stepped out from an old church painting. She survived Whittier but a short time. The frontispiece of this number of the Antiquarian is the best likeness of her.

THE AMERICAN FLAG.

BY F. G. HALLECK.

When Freedom, from her mountain height,
Unfurled her standard to the air,
She tore the azure robe of night,
And set the stars of glory there;
She mingled with the gorgeous dyes
The milky baldrick of the skies,
And striped its pure celestial white
With streakings of the morning light;
Then, from his mansion in the sun,
She called her eagle-bearer down,
And gave into his mighty hand
The symbol of her chosen land.

Flag of the free hearts' only home,
By angel-hands to valor given,
Thy stars have lit the welkin dome,
And all thy hues were born in heaven.
Forever float that standard sheet!
Where breathes the foe, but falls before us,
With Freedom's soil beneath our feet,
And Freedom's banner streaming o'er us?

NOTES.

A full account of an event at Cape Ann implicating one Samuel Fellows, who had commanded a vessel belonging to a merchant there, is given in the Essex Gazette for July 18-25, 1769. Fellows had behaved in such a manner in the West Indies that it was difficult for him to render a fair and just account of his transactions. As an easier way of settlement he informed the custom-house officers upon oath that more molasses had been landed than was reported. The vessel was thereupon seized; and Fellows served the favor of the officers of the customs, who rewarded him by giving him the command of one of his majesty's armed cutters of the coast guard, with the power of making seizures. He commenced hostilities against the merchants, stopping vessels and searching them, impressing men, etc. May 25, 1769, Deputy-sheriff Jacob Parsons of Cape Ann had in his custody Josiah Merrill as a prisoner; and Fellows, then in the harbor, with four of his men with fire-arms, cutlasses, etc., came on shore in a boat, and asked Merrill what he was doing there. Merrill replied that he was in custody for debt; and at Fellows' request Merrill broke away from the deputy and ran toward Fellows. The deputy commanded, in his majesty's name, several persons to assist in seizing and stopping his prisoner, whom they accordingly seized. Fellows, being within four rods from the deputy and his assistants, ordered his four men to fire. Two of the four men leaped upon the beach, ran toward the deputy, and when within two rods of him and his assistants fired. The shot and ball scarcely missed them, and entered a store within a few inches of where they stood; Merrill broke away and ran to the boat. Fellows' men continued firing as they left the shore in their boat, etc.

Thomas Jacques of Gloucester advertised that his negro man Titus, about twenty-one years old, ran away on the night of July 18, 1769. The negro was of middling stature, stutered considerably, and had lost part of one of his great toes. He wore a striped jacket, a striped woollen shirt and a pair of sheepskin breeches, but no hat, cap, shoes or stockings.

John Lowell, esq., was nominated to be a justice of the peace for the county of Essex by the governor at Cambridge July 12, 1769.

ANSWERS.

468. An example of the use of the word "lugg" as a measure of distance is found in the record of a grant of land in Newbury to Mr. Dumer, about 1650. By following down the title to this land it has been ascertained that a "lugg" and a rod are identical.—Ed.

469. Hannah (Wainwright) Webster was born Feb. 1, 1721-2, in Newbury, Mass., and died March 13, 1765. She was the daughter of John and Hannah (Redford) Wainwright. Grant Webster when appointed administrator to the estate of Redford Wainwright of Newbury, June 9, 1746, is called brother to said Wainwright. Grant and Hannah were married May 31, 1739. Grant Webster had no relatives of the name of Webster. He was the only son of John Webster and Mary (Smith) Webster who married and left children. John, in turn, was the only son of Henry and Esther Webster. Henry Webster came to Boston April 15, 1679, in the ship Robert from Barbadoes. He was the son of John Webster of Barbadoes who died about 1666. There is now living only one descendant of this Henry Webster bearing the name of Webster. The last male of the name was Prof. John White Webster, who was executed for the murder of Doctor Parkman. A number of descendants in the female lines are still living. I published a full account of this family in the Genealogical Magazine, June, 1905, page 97. They are in no ways, so far as I know, related to the other Websters of Essex county. Grant Webster was a graduate of Harvard college.—S. P. Sharples, Cambridge.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

CHARLES BROOKS AND HIS WORK FOR NORMAL SCHOOLS. By John Albree. Medford, 1907. This was a paper read before the Medford Historical Society May 5, 1906. Mr. Albree, with his customary care, thoroughness and taste, has prepared and printed this valuable and interesting pamphlet of thirty-one octavo pages, having added to the text four portraits of Rev. Mr. Brooks (1795-1872), the subject of the paper, who was the pastor of the Third church in Hingham, but a native of Medford. The engravings show Mr. Brooks as he looked at several ages. Mr. Albree has done well in letting the public know the kind and extent of the effort put forth by Mr. Brooks in his efforts to advance the cause of education by having teachers trained to teach, and finally the institution of the Normal school system.

GENEALOGY OF THE STIMPSON FAMILY OF CHARLESTOWN, MASS., and Allied Lines. By Charles Collyer Whittier. Boston, 1907. This volume contains the genealogical record of the descendants of Andrew Steavenson or Stimson of Cambridge, whose son Andrew Stimson removed to Charlestown about 1678. The larger part of the book consists of most of the descendants of the daughters, owing to the fact that in each of the first four generations only one male member married and had issue. There are now living only twenty-eight male descendants of Andrew Steavenson, who bear the name of Stimpson.

The volume is embellished by twelve half-tone engravings, ten of which are portraits. One index of names of persons and another of places is given. It is bound in cloth, contains two hundred and six octavo pages, and is sold for $3 by the author, whose address is 374 Blue Hill Avenue, Roxbury, Mass. The book is well printed, and everything in its appearance indicates carefulness and accuracy.

A GUIDE TO MASSACHUSETTS LOCAL HISTORY. Compiled by Charles A. Flagg. Salem, 1907. This is a volume of 250 large octavo pages, two columns to a page, printed in small type. It is a bibliographic index to the literature of the towns, cities and counties of the state, including books, pamphlets, articles in periodicals and collected works, books in preparation, historical manuscripts, newspaper clippings, etc.

Mr. Flagg is in the Library of Congress in Washington, and has an excellent chance to know what there is in the way of local literature. He has, also, been in correspondence with people who could in anyway assist in making the work complete.

After the sources of information relative to the whole state is given, the work is divided into counties and county authorities given, then each county taken up by towns alphabetically. There are certain kinds of books and references that are not included, as town records, church records, and biographies of a single subject and genealogies devoted to one family, as the existence of such are or can be readily known to the inquirer. In this work are included references to unpublished manuscripts in the possession of private persons.

The volume is published by The Salem Press Company, Salem, Mass., and neatly and strongly bound in cloth; it will be sent postpaid for $6.20.

BREED GENEALOGY.

THIS name was spelled Bread with few exceptions until after 1700. Since that date Breed has been the general spelling. The ancestor of the American family is ALLEN BREED¹. * He was born in 1601; and settled in Lynn as early as 1630. He was a farmer, and lived near the junction of what is now Summer street and the turnpike. He was one of the Long Island settlers, but returned to Lynn before 1646; and was a selectman and constable of Lynn. He married, first, —; and, second, Elizabeth, widow of William Knight, 28: 1: 1656. He was called "Old Allen Breed;" and died March 17, 1690-1, at about ninety years of age. His wife Elizabeth had probably died before him.

Children:—

- 2—I. ALLEN². See below (2).
- 3—II. ELIZABETH²; m. William Merriam about 1653; and lived in Lynn.
- 4—III. JOHN². See below (4).

ALLEN BREED², was a husbandman, and lived in Lynn. He married Mary — before 1660; and she died 30: 9: 1671. His will, dated in 1704, was proved Feb. 11, 1707. His estate was appraised at £232, 15s.

Children, born in Lynn:—

- 5—I. TIMOTHY³. See below (5).
- 6—II. JOSEPH³, b. about 1658. See below (6).
- 7—III. ALLEN³, b. 30: 6: 1660. See below (7).
- 8—IV. JOHN³, b. 28: 11: 1662; living in 1704.
- 9—V. MARV³, b. 24: 6: 16—; m. — Lewis before 1704.

* Allen Breed was probably born in Westoning parish, Bedfordshire, England. See Essex Institute Historical Collections, volume XL, pages 147-153.

10—VI. ELIZABETH³, b. 1: 9 mo: 1667; m. Thomas Burrage Nov. 16, 1687.

11—VII. SAMUEL³, b. 25: 7: 1669. See below (11).

JOHN BREED², was a resident of Lynn. He married, first, Sara Hathorne 28: 10: 1663; and she died about Nov. 22, 1676. He married, second, Sarah Hart March 4, 1677-8; and died June 28, 1678. His wife Sarah survived him, their wedded life continuing only three months. His estate was appraised at £267, 9s.

Children, born in Lynn:—

- 12—I. JOHN³, b. June 7 (Nov. 15?), 1664. See below (12).
- 13—II. SARAH³, b. Dec. 28, 1667; m. John Hood of Lynn, husbandman, before 1728; and she was of Lynn, his widow, in 1735.
- 14—III. WILLIAM³, b. 18: 3: 1671; probably d. young.
- 15—IV. EPHRAIM³, b. 16: 10: 1672; mariner; m. Martha Glas; lived in Charlestown; had children; he d. before 1728; and she was his widow in 1744.

CAPT. JOHN BREED³, born in Lynn June 7 (Nov. 15?), 1664. He was a husbandman; and lived in Lynn. He married Miss Mary Kertland April 28, 1686; and he died in Lynn Dec. 14, 1728, aged sixty-four. He went to Port Royal. His estate was valued at £2,037, 19s., 5d. In his will he gave thirty pounds to the First Church of Christ in Lynn for furnishing the Lord's table; and to his pastor, Rev. Nathaniel Hinchman, fifty pounds and his "colash." Captain Breed had brought up the wife of Rev. Mr. Hinchman from a child, and treated her as such; and also other children. He also bequeathed a sum of money to the poor widows of the First parish of Lynn, to be distributed by the deacons of the First church, and to his nephew, John Breed, he gave his great bible. Probably no more elaborate funeral ever occurred in Lynn, according to the accounts on file in the probate office; and the allowance of the bills was objected to by the heirs. Mrs. Breed survived him; and was his widow in 1743.

Child, born in Lynn:—

- 53—I. SARAH⁴, b. July 15, 1687; d. Jan. 28, 1687-8.

BY SIDNEY PERLEY.

The map on page 160 includes that part of South Salem, or "South fields," as it has been called since the first settlement of Salem, which is bounded on the north and west by the channel of South river, on the east by the harbor, and on the south by the present Fairfield and Lagrange streets. South fields comprises the peninsula south of South river; and was under the control of the proprietors of the South fields, especially that portion south of the great gate. The fields were used in common, although the lots were owned individually, until about 1743. The map is based on actual surveys and title deeds, and is drawn on a scale of four hundred and fifty feet to an inch. It shows the location of all houses that were standing there in 1700.

Stage point was so called in 1640, and was known by that name until within a few years. The whole of that peninsula is now generally known as The Point.

The brace marked "a", on the map, shows where Pond street begins; "b", Ropes street; "c", Porter street; "d", Cedar street; "e", Everett street; "f", Dow street; and "g", Harbor street.

When the mill was built in 1664, a new road was laid out to it from what is now High street.* The bridge over Forest river, at what is now the lead mills, was built by the towns of Salem and Marblehead together in the winter of 1663-4,† but the road from Marblehead (now the larger portion of Lafayette street) to the new mill bridge was not located until the spring of 1666. It was laid out by the committees of Marblehead and Salem; and the following is a copy of the record of their return:—

The Returne: of those that weare Apoynted to laye owt the Common hie waye: betwixt salem towne and marbled: is yvdyz: that the waye: shall: lye: out of the towne of marbled: as: the Common Cart waye now lyeth: fower Rodds

There was a little gate of the South fields proprietors where it is marked on the map near the mill; but the great gate in the fence that divided the common lands of the proprietors from the lands of Ruck, Curtice and Browne was at the entrance of the lane that led to Stage point. The fence ran from the mill pond to the cove of the harbor.

This main street, as shown on the map, is now called by three names. From the bridge at the mill, which ran over the old dam, to the top of the hill has been called Mill street since 1812, and probably earlier. It was called a highway in 1676; highway leading to Marblehead in 1765; and South street in 1804. That part which is now Washington street was called the common road or highway in 1690; highway that leads to Marblehead. 1706; highway leading through ye South field, 1718; ye way to Marblehead, 1758; road leading from Salem to Marblehead. 1760; South street, 1795; and old road leading from mill bridge to Marblehead. 1818. That part which is now Lafayette street was called the lane commonly called Curtice's lane in 1694; highway. 1697; road leading from Salem to Marblehead, 1779; South street, 1806; a country road, 1810; the road leading from the new South bridge to Marblehead, 1818; the public road, 1824; and Lafayette street, 1838.

The private lane leading from the mill past the three houses was in use very early, at least as soon as the houses were built. In 1735, it was called ye way on ye top of ye hill by ye mill stream; and it is still in use, leading to Dodge street.

The ancient lane to Stage point was laid out in 1678. At a meeting of the selectmen of Salem, held 23: 6: 1678, it was "Agred by the Selectmen, wth Daniell Romball & James Polland that there shall be a highway through ther land in the South feild of twenty foot wide into Stage point to be allowed one halfe by Sd Romboll out of his land & the other halfe out of James Polands land."* It was called ye way that leads down to Stage point in 1706; and ye highway that goes into Stage point in 1709. It was probably abandoned about 1764, and in that year it is described as land formerly improved as a way to Stage point.

Pond street was called New street in 1810.

Porter street was called a street leading from Lafayette street to the mill pond in 1848; and Porter street in 1858. Porter street court was called a private way in 1849.

Cedar street was, in 1839, a private way recently laid out called Cedar street.

Everett street was called a way in 1831, and a forty-foot road lately laid out in 1835.

Dow street was so called in 1807.

Harbor street was called the highway leading from the highway leading from Salem to Marblehead to Stage point, so called, in 1779; the new road leading down to Stage point, 1781; lane leading from the County road to the river, 1781; the road that leads down to the point, 1781; and Harbor street in 1800.

Ward street was described as land reserved for a new street forty feet wide in 1827; and was called a new street in 1837.

Peabody street was called by that name in 1827.

Salem street was called a street from Harbor street lately laid out in 1806; a thirty-foot way, 1806; and a private way in 1828.

The water to the west of the premises was called the South river in 1671; ye mill pond, 1675; ye mill stream, 1724; and the river, 1741. The water to the north of the premises was called ye South river in 1678; the sea, 1778; and the river, 1781. The water to the east was called ye cove in 1678; ye harbor, 1678; Salem harbor, 1690; cove coming out of ye harbor, 1709; the sea, 1778; South river, 1781.

In the sketches that follow, after 1700, titles and deeds referred to pertain to the houses and land adjoining, and not always to the whole lot, the design being, after that date, to give the history of the houses then standing principally.

Grist Mill. The town of Salem granted liberty to Mr. Will Browne, Mr. Corwine and Mr. Price, 29: 9: 1659, to "build a Grist-mill vpon the South River above m^r Rucks houfe were it may be Conuenient."* The mill was not built at this time, however. The need of another mill was again brought before the town, at a general town meeting held 2: 1 mo: 1662-3; but John Trask, in behalf of his father, who conducted the mill on North river, agreed to make as good meal as at Lynn, and that when they could not supply the town for want of water or in any other respect, they would send it to Lynn upon their own charge and have it ground there, and the matter of building another mill again postponed.† Five months later, however, at a town meeting, held 22: 6: 1663, it was "ordered that there is libertie granted for buildinge of a

At the same time (11: 9 mo: 1664), the proprietors of the mill brought an action against Mr. Pickering "for damage to them by pulling up the stakes that the millwright had set downe for placing the mill, and throwing part of their timber into the River and other part of it a drift, and throwing their wheele-barrows and other working tools into the River by night and indeavoring after the mill was set down to turne it into the Channel by night, to their great damage," etc. The actions were tried together. It was finally agreed between Mr. Pickering and the proprietors of the mill that Mr. Pickering "in regard of his damage by stoppage vpp the river belowe his lande shall be allowed him twentie pounds pvided that the ppriet^{rs} of the mill as aforefd shall haue free libertie to fett the mill where now the dam is begun and what grounde they shall make vse of to fett the mill vpon and fullie to finish the dam he the sd Jo: Pickeringe doth fullie grant vnto them and will faue them harmles ag^t Mathew Woodall or any other that shall molest them or Claime any damage from the sd ppriet^{rs} concerninge the pmiffis."‡

The mill was completed that summer.

A dwelling house was also subsequently built for the miller to live in. See section headed "John Marston House" beyond.

The mill was originally a single grist or corn-mill, and continued to be such until about 1720. The miller was William Stacey from before 1682 to his death in 1723. Because of this fact, this place of industry was called by his name for several years after his decease, being known as Stacey's mills in 1735. Another mill (that is, it is presumed, another set of stones and machinery) was added about 1720; and still another set about 1727. These three sets of stones or mills continued in use until after the Revolution. They were known as the South mills as early as 1699, and as late as 1840. Thomas Brewer was the miller from as early as 1729 till as late as 1739. Thomas Osborn was the miller in 1743 and as late as about 1760. Daniel Malloon was the miller in 1761, and until his death in the spring of 1783. They were known as Malloon's mills as late as 1831. About 1769, a "scythe mill" was added, and also a granary, the latter being in existence in 1804. The "scythe mill" existed in 1776, but was gone before 1811. One of the grist mills was taken out before 1827. A chocolate mill was established in or before 1811, and run by James Brown. It was leased by the owners of the mills, for ten years from July 26, 1825, to William Micklefield, a tobacco-nist of Salem, and changed into a snuff mill.* There was a slaughter house upon the premises, also, in 1813. A saw mill had been introduced about 1812, and that was continued as long as the mills were run. A pulverizing mill was established in or before 1827. There were then upon the premises two grist, one saw, one chocolate, and one pulverizing mill. William Frye was the miller in 1825, and continued until 1832 or later. In 1832, the proprietors of the mills were called the firm of Micklefield & Co. There were dwelling apartments in the mills Jan. 20, 1836, when, for a rental of twelve hundred dollars a year, the mills were leased for ten years from Feb. 1, 1836, by Nathaniel West, merchant, William F. Gardner, merchant, William Micklefield, tobacconist, John Jewett and Elliott Smith, cabinet makers, and the guardian of Amos F. Smith, jr., all of Salem, owners, to said Micklefield, Jewett and Elliott Smith, and to Jonathan A. Kenney, all of Salem, and Thomas H. Prime of Charlestown, housewright, the lessees being the firm of Micklefield & Co.* In 1837, the mills consisted of two grist, one saw and one snuff mill. A veneering mill was added before 1846, and that was in use for a number of years, the veneer being sawn from square mahogany logs. The mills were called the City mills as early as 1846. The snuff mill was in existence as late as 1846, and another of the grist mills was discontinued between 1837 and 1846. When the proprietors sold the plant to the Eastern Railroad Company in 1854, the mills consisted of a grist, veneer and upright saw mill. The mills were run a few years after their purchase by the railroad company.

The original proprietors were interested in the mills in the following proportions: Walter Price, Henry Bartholmew and Samuel Gardner, one-quarter each, and John Gardner and George Gardner, one-eighth each. Major Price died in 167—, and his interest passed to his widow and to her children in her discretion. She conveyed one-eighth to her daughter Elizabeth, wife of John Ruck, and the other eighth to her son John Croad. George Gardner died in 1679, having devised his one-eighth interest to his son, Capt. Samuel Gardner. Mr. Bartholmew was a merchant, and, as a gift, he conveyed his interest (one-fourth) to his daughters Hannah, wife of Dr. John Swinerton, and Abigail, wife of Nehemiah Willoughby, all of Salem, equally, Nov. 12, 1689.* Samuel Gardner died in 1689, having devised his one-fourth part to his grandchildren Abel Gardner (one-eighth), Joseph Henfield (one-sixteenth), and Mary (Henfield) Neale (one-sixteenth). John Croade, who was a merchant, conveyed his one-eighth to the miller, William Stacey, Sept. 23, 1699.† John Ruck's executors conveyed his wife's (?) interest, one-sixteenth, to Capt. Samuel Gardner of Salem, merchant,‡ and the other sixteenth to John Higginson, jr., of Salem,§ March 26, 1702. Widow Hannah Swinerton conveyed to William Browne, esq., of Salem, merchant, for fifty pounds, one-half of her interest (one-eighth) in the mill Dec. 22, 1702; and the other half, for forty pounds, April 14, 1704.¶ John Gardner died in 1705, having devised his eighth interest to his grandson, John Gardner of Mendon, mariner. William Stacey, the miller, for one hundred pounds, conveyed his one-eighth interest in the mill to William Browne, esq., of Salem, merchant, at two times (one-sixteenth each time), May 5, 1708, and April 22, 1709.†† John Gardner of Mendon conveyed his eighth interest to Capt. Samuel Gardner and the latter's son, Capt. John Gardner, equally, June 9, 1712.‡‡ William Browne, esq., conveyed one-sixteenth to his daughter Mary Lynde during his lifetime, and his other three-sixteenths he devised to her in his will, which was proved Feb. 29, 1715-6. Col. John Higginson died in 1720, having devised his sixteenth to his daughter Elizabeth, wife of John Gerrish. Capt. Samuel Gardner died in 1724, having devised his fourth part to his four grandsons, John Higginson, John Gardner, Daniel Gardner, and Samuel Gardner. Daniel Gardner and Samuel Gardner conveyed their two-sixteenths to their brother John Gardner Jan. 9, 1733.* John Gardner was a yeoman, and conveyed one-sixteenth of the mills to Jonathan Gardner of Salem, mariner, for one hundred and seventeen pounds, Dec. 10, 1735.† Mrs. Mary (Henfield) Neale, for one hundred and ten pounds, conveyed her sixteenth of "the three mills in Salem called the South Grist Mills" to Benjamin Lynde, jr., of Salem, Feb. 3, 1734-5.‡ Abel Gardner conveyed one-sixteenth of the three grist mills on South river known as the South mills, for eighty pounds, to his son Jonathan Gardner of Salem, mariner, Oct. 21, 1728;§ and died in 1739, possessed of his other sixteenth interest in the mills, which he devised to his son Abel Gardner. Abel Gardner conveyed his sixteenth to his brother Jonathan Gardner, for one hundred and twenty pounds, Dec. 28, 1739.|| John Gardner conveyed another of his sixteenths, for one hundred and twenty pounds, to Benjamin Lynde, esq., of Salem, May 1, 1738;¶ and his other sixteenth, for a similar consideration, to William Lynde of Salem, merchant, Sept. 5, 1738. Capt. John Gardner died possessed of his sixteenth interest; and his widow, Elizabeth Gardner, for one hundred pounds, conveyed it to Jonathan Gardner of Salem, merchant, May 13, 1742.†† Joseph Henfield died in 1743, having devised his sixteenth part to his son Edmund Henfield. John Higginson died in 1744; and his sixteenth descended to his son Francis Higginson. Francis Higginson died in 1761, having devised his interest to his wife Esther Higginson. She married Daniel Mackey of Salem, and they conveyed it to Daniel Malloon, for forty-three pounds, six shillings, and eight pence, Feb. 22, 1762.* Mrs. Elizabeth Gerrish died in 1734; and her sixteenth interest in the mills passed to her daughter Sarah, wife of Charles King, jr., of Salem, by the division of her real estate, Dec. 1, 1756.† Mrs. King conveyed her sixteenth to James King of Salem, block-maker, Dec. 1, 1756.‡ For forty-two pounds, James King conveyed this sixteenth interest to Daniel Malloon of Salem, miller, April 20, 1759.§ Mrs. Abigail Willoughby died, possessed of her one-eighth interest in the mills, and it descended to her son Francis Willoughby of Boston. Mr. Willoughby conveyed it to Thomas Barton of Salem June 1, 1747.|| Colonel Barton died in 1751, and his eighth interest descended to his daughter Mary, wife of Dr. Bezaleel Toppan of Salem, merchant. She conveyed it to Daniel Malloon Feb. 4, 1764.¶ Edmund Henfield of Salem, cooper, for forty-six pounds, thirteen shillings and four pence, conveyed his sixteenth part of the South mills, being three grist mills and one scythe mill, granary, etc., to Daniel Malloon Feb. 28, 1770. Mr. Malloon died in 1783, and his five-sixteenth interest descended to his grand-daughter Eunice (Bowles), wife of Nathaniel Andrew. William Lynde died in 1752, having devised his sixteenth to his brother Benjamin Lynde, esq. Benjamin Lynde died in 1781, and his three-sixteenths of the three grist mills and the scythe mill were divided among his three daughters, Mary, wife of Andrew Oliver, Lydia, wife of William Walter, and Hannah Lynde (unmarried, insane), equally, April 21, 1786. Jonathan Gardner died in 1783, having devised his one-fourth interest to his sons John Gardner and Jonathan Gardner, equally. Jonathan Gardner brought a suit against his brother John, who lived in Danvers, and recovered judgment. In satisfaction of the judgment John's one eighth interest in the saw, corn and chocolate mills and slaughter house was assigned to Jonathan Gardner July 12, 1813.* The one-sixteenth interest of Miss Hannah Lynde passed to her sister Mrs. Lydia Walter. Their mother, Madam Mary Lynde, died in the summer of 1790, and her one-fourth interest passed equally to her daughters, Mrs. Mary Oliver and Mrs. Lydia Walter. Mrs. Walter died, and her heirs conveyed one-half of her fourth interest in the mills to Jonathan Gardner of Salem, merchant, April 16, 1801;† and the other eighth, for eight hundred and seventy dollars, to John Gardner, jr., of Salem, merchant, April 16, 1801.‡ Nathaniel Andrew and his wife Eunice removed to Marblehead, and, for one hundred dollars, conveyed her five-sixteenths to Peter Hodson of Marblehead, tallow-chandler, Nov. 15, 1804.§ Mr. Hodson mortgaged the same interest to Jesse Blanchard of Marblehead, victualler, Sept. 10, 1807;|| and Mr. Blanchard soon after purchased the equity of the interest or foreclosed the mortgage. Mrs. Mary Oliver died in September, 1807, having devised her estate to her three children, Dr. Benjamin Lynde Oliver, Peter Oliver and Sarah Oliver, one-sixteenth interest passing to each of them. Her three-sixteenths were then valued at sixteen hundred and fifty dollars. Sarah's interest passed to her brother, Peter Oliver, before 1810. Dr. B. L. Oliver conveyed his sixteenth interest to Jonathan Gardner of Salem, merchant, Jan. 28, 1819.¶ Jonathan Gardner had probably conveyed his first interest (one-eighth) (which he bought of the heirs of Mrs. Walter in 1801) to Nathaniel West before this time. Peter Oliver was deranged, and his guardian, for six hundred dollars each, conveyed his two-sixteenths to Abel Lawrence, jr., and John B. Lawrence, both of Salem, by separate deeds, Feb. 26, 1821;* and Abel Lawrence, for six hundred and eighty-seven dollars and fifty cents, conveyed his one-sixteenth to Charles Lawrence of Salem, merchant, March 1, 1824.† Charles Lawrence, for nine hundred dollars, conveyed his sixteenth interest to Nathaniel West of Danvers, esquire, April 20, 1830;‡ and John B. Lawrence of Salem, for a similar consideration, conveyed his sixteenth to Mr. West May 27, 1831.§ John Gardner of Danvers, yeoman, for fifteen hundred dollars, conveyed his eighth interest to Mr. West Jan. 11, 1830.|| Jesse Blanchard conveyed his five-sixteenths to William Frye of Danvers, miller, Dec. 1, 1825;¶ and, for forty-three hundred dollars, Mr. Frye, who had removed to Salem, miller, conveyed his five-sixteenths to William Micklefield, tobaccoist, John Jewett, Elliott Smith and Amos F. Smith, cabinet makers, all of Salem, being a firm, Micklefield & Co., July 9, 1832. Amos F. Smith died in 1833, and his interest descended to his son Amos F. Smith, jr. Jonathan Gardner died in 1821; and his five-sixteenths descended to his son William F. Gardner, who conveyed his five-sixteenths, equally, to Jonathan A. Kenney†† and Thomas H. Prime,‡‡ both of Salem, mahogany dealers, Jan. 27, 1846, by two deeds. Oct. 21, 1837, Elliott Smith conveyed five-sixty-fourths to William Micklefield,§§ who died in 1840, possessed of five-thirty-seconds of the mills, which interest was then appraised at three thousand, four hundred and thirty-seven dollars. of the will of Mr. Micklefield, for fifteen hundred and sixteen dollars, conveyed his said interest in the mills to John Jewett, Thomas H. Prime and Jonathan A. Kenney of Salem, comprising the firm of Prime, Kenney & Co., March 23, 1849.* The guardian of Amos F. Smith, for eleven hundred and twenty-five dollars, conveyed his five-sixty-fourths, at auction, to John Jewett of Salem, cabinet maker, June 2, 1846.† Nathaniel West, for sixty-five hundred and eighty dollars, conveyed his six-sixteenths to John Jewett, Thomas H. Prime, and Jonathan A. Kenney, all of Salem, mahogany dealers, equally, Oct. 12, 1849.‡ John Jewett, Thomas H. Prime and Jonathan A. Kenney, all of Salem, "owners of the City mills," for eighteen hundred and eighty-one dollars and eighty-seven cents, conveyed one-tenth of the City mills to Thomas S. Jewett of Salem, housewright, Oct. 18, 1849.§ John Jewett, cabinet maker, Thomas H. Prime, mahogany dealer, Jonathan A. Kenney, mahogany dealer, and Thomas S. Jewett, housewright, all of Salem, for fifty thousand dollars, conveyed the City mills, grist, veneer and upright saw mill, buildings and land to the Eastern Railroad Company June 17, 1854.¶

John Marston House. The executors of the will of Capt. Walter Price of Salem, merchant, conveyed this lot of land to Henry Bartholmew, Joseph Grafton, George Gardner, Samuel Gardner, sr., and said executors, "owners of the new mill," March 10, 1675.¶ They built a small house upon the lot soon after their purchase, probably the same year. Dea. John Marston of Salem, carpenter, was living in the house in 1699, and had then bought out the interests of most of the owners probably. John Croade of Salem, mariner, for ten pounds, conveyed to him one fourth of the house and lot, "upon the entrance of the South field," Oct. 13, 1699.* Hannah Swinnerton of Salem, for five pounds, conveyed to Mr. Marston one-eighth of the house and lot, with liberty of a highway "along ye mill pond to ye mill dam," April 29, 1706.† No other conveyances of interests in this estate to Mr. Marston have been found. Mr. Marston, for love, conveyed the house and land to his grandson, Benjamin Marston of Taunton, clothier, Dec. 8, 1716.‡ Benjamin Marston, then of Barnstable, clothier, for twenty-five pounds, conveyed the house and lot to Thomas Brewer of Salem, miller, June 26, 1729§ Mr. Brewer, for forty pounds, conveyed the estate to Benjamin Lynde of Salem, esquire, Dec. 18, 1739.¶ Mr. Lynde, for fifty-three pounds, six shillings and eight pence, conveyed the land, with the house and barn thereon, to Thomas Osborn, cordwainer, and John Osborn, mariner, both of Salem, Oct. 25, 1758.* Thomas Osborn died before Oct. 9, 1765, when his administrator, for four pounds, conveyed his half of the house, barn and land, at auction, to John Warden of Salem, housewright. Mr. Warden, for a similar consideration, conveyed the same estate to Daniel Malloon of Salem, miller (the administrator of Mr. Osborn's estate), Oct. 31, 1765. The house was probably removed immediately.

William Stacey Houses. That part of this lot lying south of the southern dashes was a part of the lot of Capt. Walter Price of Salem, merchant, and was conveyed by him to Charles Emlett of Salem, gunsmith, "being at or near ye Southfield gate, by ye mill in Salem," Oct. 10, 1676 (?).†† Mr. Emlett (Amlett) built a house upon the lot, and lived there until he died, in or before 1693. Mary Amlett, a Frenchwoman, then owned it until June 9, 1694, when she conveyed it to William Stacey of Salem, miller, in consideration of her life support.* He owned it until July 19, 1709, when, the agreement being abandoned, Mr. Stacey reconveyed the house and lot to her.† There was then a shop, also, upon the lot. For fifteen pounds, she conveyed the lot, with "part of an old house thereon," to George Peale of Salem, carpenter, Sept. 2, 1712.‡ Mr. Peale probably took down the old house immediately.

That part of the lot lying between the dashes was also a part of the lot of Capt. Walter Price of Salem, merchant, and was conveyed by him to Peter Harvey of Salem, shipwright, Feb. 26, 1671.§ Mr. Harvey built a house thereon, and, for twenty pounds, conveyed the house and lot to William Stacy of Salem, miller, May 24, 1693.¶ The house was removed apparently soon afterward; and Mr. Stacey died possessed of the land in 1723.

That part of this lot lying north of the dashes was the property of Bartholmew Gedney of Salem; and he had a house and barn upon it. For one hundred pounds, he conveyed it, with the house and barn, to William Stacey of Salem, miller, Aug. 7, 1682.¶ A right of way for a cart to the highway was conveyed with the estate. Mr. Stacey died in 1723, possessed of the lot and house, called in the inventory of his estate "an old house," and valued, with the land, at fifty pounds. The administrator of his estate conveyed the house and lot to Peter Windeat of Salem, currier, Dec. 31, 1724; and Mr. Windeat conveyed it, for the same consideration, to Jonathan Woodwell of Salem, mariner, the administrator and son-in-law of Mr. Stacey, Jan. 4,

1724-5.* Mr. Woodwell lived in the house in 1735; and died in 1737, possessed of the estate, which was then appraised at eighty pounds. For seventy pounds, the administrator of his estate conveyed it to Henry Coffin of Salem, cordwainer, July 15, 1741.† The next day, for a similar consideration, Mr. Coffin conveyed the house and lot to Thomas Sleeman of Salem, coaster.‡ Mr. Sleeman (or Sluman) died, and the house and lot came into the possession of John Sluman of Salem, mariner (probably son of Thomas). The house was gone before 1797, the date of Mr. Sluman's death. The deed of the administrator of John Sluman, dated Nov. 18, 1799, conveyed to John Henfield only the land, with the rocks in the old cellar.§

The Pound. At the time of the death of Col. Bartholmew Gedney, esq., of Salem, in 1698, he had a wharf "on ye Southfield side" called "ye pound." It has not been exactly located, but surroundings indicate that it was at the end of the lane and his lot as marked on the map. Nov. 3, 1701, in the division of his real estate, this was assigned to his daughter Deborah, wife of Francis Clark.

Estate of Bartholmew Gedney Lot. One divided half of this lot of marsh land was granted by the town of Salem 19:6:1630, in the following words: "Granted to mr Peeters the marsh lyinge over against his now dwelling containinge about an aker & halfe or therabout on the other side of the water." Charles Gott of Wenham, attorney of "Mr. Hugh Peeters, sometimes pastor of the church of Christ in Salem," for three pounds, conveyed it to George Emery of Salem, chirurgeon, July 1, 1659.¶ Doctor Emery owned the remainder of this lot Nov. 28, 1671, when he conveyed the entire lot to Mr. John Gedney, sr., of Salem, vintner.† Mr. Gedney died in 1688; and by his will his son Col. Bartholmew Gedney became possessed of the lot. He died Feb. 28, 1697-8; and the estate was not divided among his heirs until Nov. 3, 1701, when this land was assigned to his daughter Deborah, wife of Francis Clarke.

William Stacey Lot. This was a part of the lot of Walter Price of Salem, who died in 1674. It passed to his son Capt. John Price, and then to Walter's grandson, John Croade, who conveyed it to William Stacey of Salem, miller, in 1697 or 1698; and the latter owned it in 1700.

Joseph Mansfield Lot. This was a part of the lot of Walter Price, who died in 1674. It then passed by will to his son Capt. John Price and grandson John Croade of Salem, merchant. Mr. Croade became owner of the entire lot, and, for twenty-eight pounds, conveyed it to William Stacey of Salem, miller, July 19, 1697.† For thirty-two pounds, Mr. Stacey conveyed it to Joseph Mansfield of Lynn, husbandman, Dec. 29, 1698;‡ and Mr. Mansfield owned it until 1716.

Samuel Ruck Lot. That part of this lot lying westerly of the dashes belonged to Capt. Walter Price at an early date. He died in 1674, and the land descended to his son Capt. John Price of Salem and the deceased's, grandson John Croade of Salem, merchant. Upon the death of Capt. John Price, in 1691, Mr. Croade became sole owner, and he conveyed the lot, containing five acres of upland "upon ye entrance at ye southfield," to Joseph Orne of Salem, May 18, 1697.§ The lot passed to Samuel Ruck, who owned it until 1702.

That part of the lot lying easterly of the dashes belonged to and was a part of the large lot of Daniel Rumball as early as 1653. March 18, 1681-2, he conveyed it to his daughter Alice and her husband, William Curtice, in consideration of love and his support for life;* and Mr. Curtice, for sixteen pounds, conveyed it to Joseph Stacey of Salem, carpenter, Aug. 14, 1690.† Mr. Stacey died three months later; having orally requested that his property should descend to his mother. His father, William Stacey of Salem, miller, conveyed it, for sixteen pounds, to John Croade of Salem, merchant, July 19, 1697;‡ and the lot passed to Samuel Ruck, who owned it in 1702.

William Curtice Lot. This was the lot of Daniel Rumball of Salem, blacksmith, as early as 1653. For love and his support for life, he conveyed it to his daughter Alice and her husband, William Curtice, March 18, 1681-2;* and Mr. Curtice owned it in 1700.

William Browne Lot ("Stage Point"). This lot was known as Stage Point as early as 1640. That part of the lot lying northerly of the dashes belonged to Henry Bartholmew of Salem, merchant, in 1678; and for one hundred pounds he conveyed it to William Browne, jr., of Salem, merchant, Dec. 27, 1690.§ That part of the lot southerly of the dashes belonged to Mr. Browne as early as 1678. He died possessed of the entire lot in 1716.

That part of the lot within the dashes was conveyed by Richard Hide of Salem, ship carpenter, to John Marston, jr., of Salem, house carpenter, March 22, 1677-8;|| and it became the property of William Browne soon after.

That part of the lot lying southeasterly of the dashes was the estate of Mr. William Browne, sr., in 1677-8; and was his for many years thereafter.

Benjamin Allen Lot. Widow Dorothy King of Salem owned this lot of planting ground Oct. 8, 1653, when, for seven

John Marston Lot. That part of this lot lying northerly of the dashes was conveyed by Richard Hide of Salem, ship-carpenter, to John Marston, jr., of Salem, house carpenter, March 22, 1677-8.‡

That part of the lot lying southerly of the dashes belonged apparently to George Ropes in 1662. It was the property of Mr. William Browne, sr., in 1678 ; and a few years later it came into the hands of Deacon Maiston, who continued to own the entire lot as late as 1709.

GEORGE PEABODY.

George Peabody was born in Peabody, Mass., then a part of Danvers, Feb. 18, 1795, being a son of Thomas and Judith (Dodge) Peabody, people of ordinary means. George attended the district school of his neighborhood, and when twelve years old became a clerk in the grocery store of Capt. Sylvester Proctor, with whom he remained for three years. He then went to Thetford, Vt., where he lived for a year with his maternal grandfather, Jeremiah Dodge. A year later, he became a clerk in the store of his brother David Peabody, in Newburyport, Mass., being a clerk in that store at the time of the great fire of 1811. After the fire, he decided to enter into business on his own account, and, although but sixteen years of age, he secured the credit of two thousand dollars worth of goods from James Reed of Boston through kindly letters of recommendation from Prescott Spaulding of Newburyport, who was attracted by his manliness, vigor, and prepossessing appearance. These goods were sold at a good profit; subsequent credit was easily obtained, and he soon became a merchant of prominence.

In 1812, he engaged in business in Georgetown, D. C., with his uncle, Gen. John Peabody. The first consignment of goods made to them there was sent by Francis Todd of Newburyport. He always had the most grateful remembrances of the latter town, the home of his true and trustful friends, without whose confidence and aid he would probably have been only a clerk. In later years, he made a donation to its public library.

His uniform affability and curtesy won him many friends; and he was always unassuming in dress and deportment. In both social and business engagements he was always punctual; and his success was simply the outcome of a well balanced business mind.

He was a good conversationalist, and an attractive writer and speaker. He never married; and his tastes were simple and personal expenses small.

In 1814, when only nineteen years old, he entered into partnership with Elisha Riggs in Georgetown, D. C., the capital being furnished by Mr. Riggs, and the business being conducted by Mr. Peabody, who frequently took long journeys on horseback to extend the sales of his house. In 1815, they removed the business to Baltimore; and, in 1822, established branch houses at New York and Philadelphia. The firm was eminently successful. Upon the retirement of Mr. Riggs, in 1830, Mr. Peabody became the senior member of the firm, and under its new name of Peabody, Riggs & Company became one of the leading concerns of the country. In the course of his business he made several trips to Europe, visiting London first in 1827.

In 1837, he withdrew from the firm, and began business with others as a merchant and broker, under the style of "George Peabody & Co., of Warrford Court, City." The firm did a banking and general brokerage business. Again he was successful in his operations; and he thus began the foundation of the large fortune which he eventually secured.

He had great faith in the country of his birth, and always sustained the credit of its bonds and other securities. He carried the state of Maryland through a critical financial period; and in London, during a time of much depression of American securities, he greatly helped in restoring confidence. He went so far in this respect that at the close of the civil war three-quarters of all his estate was invested in national and state securities.

At the time of the great exhibition of 1851, congress failed to appropriate money to enable the American division to be fitted up, and the exhibitors became disheartened. Mr. Peabody advanced the large sum required, and America was duly represented.

The list of Mr. Peabody's gifts is too long and varied to be given here. They cover the realms of science, religion, litciature, education, and general philanthropy, and schools, libraries, churches and other institutions came into existence at his word. He wished, as far as it lay in his power, to be his own executor.

He provided the means of fitting out the Advance, Doctor Kane's ship, for the Arctic voyage in search of Sir John Franklin.

His gifts to the town of his birth, principal for the Peabody Institute, amount to more than two hundred thousand dollars.

He gave to the Peabody Institute at Baltimore, Maryland, one million, five hundred thousand dollars.

In 1859, he began to execute a long cherished purpose of establishing homes for the poor of London, England. The tenements which he erected are occupied by twenty thousand persons, who pay a reasonable rent for pleasant, comfortable homes. To this purpose he gave, in all, two and one-half million dollars. That was his largest foreign expenditure. His largest American charity was a gift of three million dollars known as the Southern Education Fund.

Among other donations, every Essex county sketch of him ought to mention his gift of one hundred and five thousand dollars for the church and public library in Georgetown; one hundred and forty thousand dollars to the Peabody Academy of Science in Salem; twenty-five thousand dollars to the Phillips Academy at Andover; fifty thousand dollars for the Peabody Institute in Danvers; and one hundred and fifty thousand dollars each to Harvard and Yale colleges.

Mr. Peabody's health began to fail shortly before his last visit to America, in the summer of 1869; and he returned to London, where he passed away Nov. 4, 1869, at the age of seventy-four. The highest honors were accorded him in England and America, services being held over his remains in Westminster Abbey. The warship Monarch, one of the finest ironclads in the British navy, was ordered by Her Majesty's government to transport the body of the dead philanthropist to his native land. It was conveyed by an American warship, and also a French vessel detailed by the Emperor for that service. Prince Arthur accompanied the fleet, and attended the funeral exercises in the South church in Peabody, as the representative of the queen. The burial took place, in the midst of a great and wild snow storm, in Harmony Grove cemetery in Salem. The funeral oration was by Robert C. Winthrop.

Queen Victoria had offered Mr. Peabody a baronetcy, but he had refused the title, preferring to be the simple American that he was. His choicest mementoes, the queen's portrait, medals, etc., are in the Peabody Institute in Peabody, where they can be seen.

In this number of the Antiquarian is given a profile likeness of Mr. Peabody reproduced from Ballou's Monthly Magazine for September, 1869.

JOHN AUSTIN.

The following deposition is copied from the record in the Essex county registry of deeds, Executions, book 3, leaf 170.

I Joseph Bradeen of Marblehead in the County of Essex yeoman, on oath depose testify and say that I was born in the Town of york in the County of york that in the year of our Lord seventeen hundred and seventy I left that place and came to Marblehead where I have lived ever since, and I further Testify that I well knew Matthew Austin of said york who was a Respectable Farmer in said Town, he lived within about one mile of the place where I was born, I was about twenty seven years old when I left york. some years after my residence at Marblehead a Stranger came to my house and enquired if I knew him. I told him I did not, he then asked me whether I did not once belong to the Town of york, and whether I was not acquainted with Matthew Austin of that place. I told him I was born in york and well knew Matthew Austin of that place. He then said that he was the son of said Matthew and that he knew me very well and had often seen me at york and he well knew all my friends there, and told me their names, and told me whom my Sisters were married to. I was frequently at york to see my friends, but John Austin who was the person who called on me, must have been quite young and I do not recollect I ever saw him there. He lived a number of years in Marblehead and always went by the name of old york. He afterwards left Marblehead and went with his family to live in Boston, and further your Deponent says not.

Joseph Bradeen.

Sworn to at Marblehead Dec. 16, 1819, before Nathan Bowen and Ralph H. French, justices of the peace, at the request of the town of Marblehead.

IMPORTANCE OF LOCAL HISTORY.

BY DANIEL S. DURRIE.

There are few branches of knowledge whose importance has been so generally and justly extolled, as that of history. From the days of Cicero, who proclaimed it to be "the light of truth, the life of memory and the preceptress of life," the world has been accustomed to hear its praises and listen to the recital of its powers. History has been justly termed "philosophy teaching by example," and in a broad sense "the whole past course of humanity from the first moment of its existence to the present hour."

The love of history seems inseparable from human nature. It is natural for man to preserve as far as is in his power the memory of those of his own time and of those that preceded it. Rude heaps of stone and earth have been raised and ruder hymns or rythmes have been composed by nations who had not yet the use of arts and letters. An application of the study of history that does not tend to make us better men and better citizens is at least but an ingenious sort of idleness; and the knowledge thus acquired is at best a creditable kind of ignorance. The study of history, however, of all others is the most proper to train us up to private and public virtue.

Important, however, and instructive as is the narrative of past events and the influence they have exerted on the world in civilization and refinement, history is seldom so interesting as when descending from the loftier and more splendid regions of general narration, it dwells for a while in an humbler place, and delights in the details of events of every-day life, and of the history of the people.

"The struggles of empires and the convulsions of nations," says a writer, "while they have much of sublimity have also much of uncertainty and indistinctness. They are too large for the grasp of ordinary minds, or too indefinite to act on common sensibilities; while the interests awakened by the details of local history are such as from the facility of comprehension and the identity of the objects presented, must necessarily come home at once to the feelings of every reader. They place us by the firesides, or walk with us among the graves of our fathers, attaching a living story to the thousand inanimate objects with which they are surrounded."

Under all forms of government, in this country, whether colonial, provincial or republican, many important measures have been submitted to the primary assemblies of the people to be examined and acted on by them. Thus we find in the revolutionary war, in particular, towns and parishes not only expressed their opinion on many subjects connected with that event, but they actually exercised much of the jurisdiction of a national government in prosecuting that war. How these small corporations organized solely for municipal or parochial purposes, transacted that business in that war, as well as the more subsequent ones, in procuring soldiers, stores and the means for carrying them forward is well known.

"The great object of local history," says Mr. Shattuck, "is to furnish the first elements of general history, to record facts rather than deductions from facts. In these small settlements dotted over this country (as well as others) are to be found many of the first moving causes which operate upon and revolutionize public opinion. Many facts, minute in themselves, and regarded by many as trivial and unimportant, are really of great service. The details, which it is the appropriate province of the local historian to spread before the public, are not so much history itself as materials for history. It is the work of the general historian, who has before him all the particulars of the great natural and political landscape, to exhibit the connection of the several parts and to show how they depend one upon another in bringing about the great changes which have been taking place and affecting the condition of society."

No people in the world can have so great an interest in the history of their country as that of the United States; for there are none who enjoy an equally great share in their country's historical acts.

John Quincy Adams once made a remark which contains a world of truth: "That posterity delights in details." And it is highly creditable to the intelligence of the American people, that so much of the early history of the towns and villages of the country has been written, and nothing comes closer to the sensibilities of the people than the details of events that occurred when their fathers or ancestors were on the field of action and took their part in building up their several locations. This attachment to our homes is a wise provision of Divine economy. It is eminently proper that every person should entertain a particular attachment to the place where he was born, and where he has made his home. Change of location does not always wean the affection away from the old fireside. By the aid of memory we are privileged to call back the early bygone scenes, and appreciate the lessons we received that had so important a bearing on our subsequent life.

To trace the history of our ancestors, and transmit a record of their deeds to posterity, is a duty we owe to the past and to the future. Such a record must be preserved as invaluable by the immediate descendants and kindred of those who once lived and acted where they now do, and whose ashes repose in their soil, and it cannot be without interest to those who have gone out from their kindred to dwell in other parts of the country, nor to those who have come to dwell in the habitations made vacant by the removal or death of the original occupants. What the present place of our residence once was, who originally occupied it and by what means and by whom it has become what it now is—are questions which can be answered only by minute topographical history.

This work, however, must be done from unselfish motives. It is useless to disguise the fact that the labor of collecting the materials and preparing the same for publication, brief and imperfect as they may be, is one of magnitude. No one until he has tried the experiment can fully appreciate the labor and patience which are requisite in connecting isolated facts, and the perplexity which is caused in reconciling apparent contradictions and removing doubts. Such kind of labor is never remunerative, but the consciousness of having redeemed from undeserved neglect the history of our homes and of our forefathers, and rescuing from oblivion many facts which would otherwise have been lost, will be a source of gratification if no other reward is received.

We wish we could suitably impress the importance of this subject on the attention of the people.

THE OLD HOME.

BY EBEN E. REXFORD.

It stands in a desolate, weed-grown garden,
Where once the rose and the lilac grew,
And the lily lifted a waxen chalice
To catch the wine of the summer's dew.
The grass creeps in o'er the mossy threshold,
The dust lies deep on the rotting floor,
And the wind at will is coming, going Through broken window and open door.

O poor old house, do you grieve as men do
For the vanished things that were yours of yore,
Like a heart in whom love was one time tenant,
But has gone away to come back no more?
Do you dream of the dead as the days pass over?
Of the pang of parting and joy of birth
In hearts turned dust? Ah, that dust is scattered
By winds of lifetimes to the ends of earth!

See! Here by the path is one little blossom!
It lifts to the sunshine a fragile face.
It springs from a root that some dead hand planted
A century back in the dear home place.
Little thought they whom the old house sheltered
That life would fade as the leaves that fall.
They had their day and are quite forgotten—
The little flower has outlived them all!

EDITORIAL.

This number completes volume eleven of The Essex Antiquarian. There have been published during the year the wills proved in Essex county from 1662 to 1664; the gravestone inscriptions in the town of Hamilton before 1800; the genealogies of Essex county families from Bradley to Brickett inclusive; the record of the Essex county Revolutionary soldiers and sailors from Bond to Bradbury; abstracts of the old Norfolk county records, 1672 and 1673; Ipswich quarterly court records and files, 1655 to 1657 inclusive; and miscellaneous genealogical notes from the records from Boovy to Bradstreet.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

WATERMAN, ILLINOIS, YEAR BOOK, 1905. Compiled by George Edward Congdon. Hiawatha, Kansas, 1907. This little year book, though somewhat delayed in its appearance, is larger and more interesting even than the preceding editions. As before, it contains the local events of the year, notices of deceased persons, directories of societies, etc., births and deaths, and much other information of local interest. It has seventy-eight pages, bound in paper, and is embellished with fifteen half-tone engravings. The price is fifty cents, and it is for sale by the compiler at Hiawatha.

A CONDENSED GENEALOGY OF ONE BRANCH OF THE EDWARDS FAMILY OF CONCORD AND ACTON, MASSACHUSETTS, AND OF THE ALLIED FAMILIES. By John Harrington Edwards, D. D. Brooklyn, N. Y., 1907. This is a pamphlet of twenty-eight octavo pages, containing brief notes of the Chetlain, Clemens, Conant, Crandall, Edwards, Fletcher, Harrington, Haskell, Haven, Heald, Knickerbocker, Locke, Pierson, Starr, Tower and Van Veghten families, etc., especially referring to the first of these names in America. Dr. Edwards' address is 122 Willow street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

VITAL RECORDS OF BRADFORD, MASSACHUSETTS, to the End of the Year 1840. Topsfield, Mass., 1907. The Topsfield Historical Society has collected, arranged and published in a volume of 373 octavo pages, bound in cloth, the births, marriages and deaths, which have occurred in the town of Bradford before 1850. It also includes the baptisms of children when the date of birth is not known, and also the intention of marriage if the record of the marriage is not found in the records. It includes not only the information derived from the town records, but also from court records, church records, gravestone inscriptions and family bibles. This volume is uniform with those published at the expense of the state; and will be sent postpaid for $3.90 by The Topsfield Historical Society, Topsfield, Mass.

A HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES AND ITS PEOPLE. By Elroy McKendree Avery. Volume III. Cleveland, O., 1907. This is the third volume of Doctor Avery's work on the history of the nation, which he has been preparing for a quarter of a century. This volume contains 446 pages, and is even better in every way, if possible, than the preceding ones. There are more illustrations, covering a greater variety of subjects, but the beautiful artistic effect of the mechanical execution of the first volumes it is difficult to surpass. The illustrations delight the antiquarian and historian as well as the general reader, and almost every page has portraits, maps, or other engravings. The frontispiece is a bust portrait of William Penn. Comprehensively, the engravings also include portraits of Edward Hyde, John Locke, Sir George Carteret, Anthony Ashley Cooper, George Monk, Henry Morgan, Lord Culpepper, Lord Howard, Charles Calvert, Augustine Herman, James II., Sir Edmund Andros, Josiah Winslow, Simon Bradstreet, Charles II., Thomas Thacher, Isaac Jogues, Bishop Laval, Jacques Marquette, Queen Mary II., King William, King Louis XIV., Queen Anne, Robert Walpole, Thomas Pelham Holles, King George I., William Rhett, James Logan, Earl of Bellomont, Peter Schuyler, Isaac Addington, Increase Mather, William Stoughton, Samuel Sewall, Joseph Dudley, Cotton Mather, Fitz-

John Winthrop, and many other portraits, maps, seals, autographs, title pages, documents, coats of arms, coins, buildings, flags, etc. The printing of the maps in colors enables many points to be brought out with perfect clearness, which would be impossible in black and white. The typography is in correspondence with the former volumes, being exceptionally pleasing; and we would again express our admiration of this beautiful work, so sumptuous as well as substantial in all its parts.

The scheme of the work is what is known as the horizontal method of presenting history. Doctor Avery carries along the history of each section of the country at once. This is done by writing it in chronological periods. This is the only way, in our opinion, that history of this kind should be written, as contemporaneity is a most important factor in the understanding of the occurrences and situations of a complex history.

This volume covers a period which is more familiar and therefore more interesting to the general reader than those previously issued. The years included are from 1660 to 1745, the period between active colonization and the final struggle for the conquest of New France. It is the neglected period of American history, and lacks many of the dramatic characteristics of the times preceding and succeeding it. Much new matter is introduced, and a new interest in this period of our history will arise from this presentation.

Doctor Avery is entirely unprejudiced in his statements, insisting upon the truth in each instance, in many cases making original investigations to learn the actual facts in controverted cases, and always consulting the best authorities. His simple, lucid and graphic style makes his chapters interesting aside from the intrinsic attractiveness of the subject matter.

The work is to be issued in fifteen volumes, and the price for the edition in cloth binding is $6.25 net. The publishers are The Burrows Brothers Company, Cleveland, Ohio.
